Dedication

to

Samuel Hoffman Derickson,
M.S., Sc. D.

None more worthy than he can grace our book of
Lebanon Valley

Since becoming a part of the College in 1903, he has done a man's share in making our Alma Mater a better place under the sun

*"Work of his hand
He nor commends nor grieves:
Pleads for itself and fact;
As unrepenting Nature leaves
Her every act."*

Foreword

THAT we may here portray one year of our life, and that these few written things may recall volumes of rich moments spent at Lebanon Valley,
we present

Libertas Per Veritatem

THE light of historical research reveals the man of yesterday as the slave of myriad ills begotten of ignorance. The superstitious fear by which he was perpetually enthralled invested every tree, rock, living creature, and heavenly body with a malignant power that might at any time be released for his destruction. Nature and its forces were to him a confusion of evil spirits; each must be appeased if he were to escape the dreadful consequences of its wrath.

Centuries passed, and in their unfolding man groped his way through the darkness toward the dawning light of truth. Order evolved from chaos, law emerged from confusion, knowledge replaced superstition, and one by one, the chains forged on the anvil of ignorance were broken.

Not without a struggle were the shackles removed. The Hebrew prophet, the Greek philosopher, the modern scientist — all engaged in the conflict. Only as the result of tireless effort was the light of truth focused with ever-increasing intensity upon the affairs of men. Nor is the conflict ended. Fetters still remain; a vast treasure still lies undiscovered; millions still grapple with the forces of darkness, their lives in perpetual slavery to ignorance.

Here lies the challenge; Lebanon Valley College accepts it. To the discovery and transmission of truth she unselfishly dedicates her all. Nor is her ideal a chimerical one, a mere will-o'-the-wisp. She knows the past; history reveals to her the full potency of truth. And she, too, knows the Man of Galilee who promised, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

The Senior

At the end of the process he stops for breath, views the past, and prepared as he may be, faces the future. The narrow existence of the scholar is brought to a close; and he enters life to rub shoulders with fellow men. His training gives him the opportunity to serve; to work for a fuller realization of that which he learns is life. He can find and impart to others the most serene happiness, and although he may stumble, his is the thrill of exhaustion in a worthy struggle. Truly,

*"We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts,
not breath;
In feelings, not in figures on the dial."*

Senior Class History

WHEN the Class of '30 meekly and unobtrusively entered Lebanon Valley College, it had secret ambitions and ideals, half formed perhaps, but nevertheless positive. Freshman days decided many things. One of them was that there was safety in numbers, but only when the "numbers" agree as did this new group on the campus. Accordingly, this group became "our class", and we worked with conscious effort toward a common goal. Nor did we sacrifice those personal ideals for the sake of this new purpose, but adapted the motto, "To thine own self be true." To us, individuality need not be subordinated to class loyalty, but can be developed along with it.

Since with each succeeding year we took our places nearer the front, we emerged from haziness into prominence. Leaders came forward naturally to fill the vacancies left by others. Instead of following traditions, our class has gained the reputation of breaking away from the "beaten path". The many new ideas which combined the efforts and talents of the class to produce our annual won praise from all who saw the book. We are especially proud of the opinion of the printer, who said that there was more real material in our book than in any other college annual which he had handled. As Juniors, we presented Barrie's "Dear Brutus".

We have come to the year which furnishes our name, which, four years ago, seemed our year of triumph. However, with responsibility has come understanding. We have learned to love Lebanon Valley, for it was here that contacts were made which fashioned our class and started it toward its higher ideals. May our Alma Mater say of us as King Arthur said of his Round Table,

*"A glorious company, the flower of men
To serve as model for the mighty world,
And be the fair beginning of a time."*

Financial Secretary	RUTH I. LILLER

The Junior

The first thrills of an upperclassman, and a beginning of more serious things. Intermingled with these, a ceaseless bustling—engagements to fill, social functions, more intense scholastic requirements. Childish things are put away, and he begins to think for himself. Barriers are broken, illusions dispelled, and out of the jumble he begins to see a clearer light. His association with character develops character; ideals are gradually erected; the social being prepares for a symbiotic existence.

Junior Class History

IN THE autumn of 1927, one hundred and eleven curious Freshmen entered Lebanon Valley College. With unequalled enthusiasm we had chosen L. V. C. as our Alma Mater, and vowed to uphold her former worthy standards. Although there were many hardships and oppressions to be endured, we strove to do our best to make for progress.

The first meeting held by our class was a get-together meeting where we got acquainted. Here we elected our class officers and drew up a constitution. Although we lost all of the inter-class contests except football, we were undaunted, and tried all the more to overcome the next obstacles that should come our way.

The following fall we returned with our numbers quite reduced, but our vitality increased through the experiences of our Freshman year. Turning the tide in the opposite direction from our Freshman year, we proved our superiority by winning the Scrap and the Tug. Coming to the end of our Sophomore year, we departed to our homes to prepare to conquer greater worlds in our Junior year.

Now, as upperclassmen, we have taken up our responsibilities, and are endeavoring to guide those who look up to us in such a manner as to bring only praise to the institution of which we are a part. Our first venture was the Junior play, "The Private Secretary". Never before has the success of the Junior play been quite equal to that of this year. In addition, the Class of '31 was the first to present its play outside of the campus.

We are proud to say that, although our class is small in numbers, it represents as many professions as are represented in any other class of the college. As the crowning work of our third year, we are editing this year book, with the hope that it will be a fitting tribute to our Alma Mater.

"His own character is the arbiter of everyone's fortune."

"Phip" has a marvelous personality, with sociability and kindness, two traits closely akin to virtues outstanding in his character. After being in his company a half hour, you will swear your friendship was a matter of years. At heart "Phip" is an analyst; not in the literal scientific sense of the word, but in the capability of seeing and understanding people for their intrinsic worth. It is this power of understanding without a lengthy explanation that everyone appreciates in his friendship.

For a few years "Phip" was a student at Massanutten Military Academy, entering the class of '31 as a second year man. From the beginning he was well liked on the campus, and his popularity has not diminished in any form since that time.

It is with keen interest that we look forward to "Phip's" career as a business man.

"Devoted, yet cheerful; active, yet resigned."

This quiet and reserved young man came to us last year from the University of Pennsylvania.

From the moment he entered the dormitory, he was looked upon as a scholar and a gentleman. His scholastic ability is attested to by the fact that before each exam his room is filled with a group of the less studious getting the "dope" for the next day's quiz. If they do not get it, it is not Beam's fault. Managing with ease to have good marks, J. O. still has had time to take part in social activities, which functions are not complete without him. There are few of us who have not been made better by his bright outlook and quiet philosophy of life.

"Corker" is one of Dr. Bender's foremost followers in the field of Chemistry, studying his law of osmosis and calculating the concentration constant with perfect ease.

As an entertainer he is a professional, strumming a banjo and a "uke" with the skill of an Hawaiian. His falsetto voice pitched about three octaves above the piano keyboard, always makes a hit with the crowd.

We're sure George will be successful and our best wishes go with him.

"Lovable, and to be loved."

A quiet nature is sometimes far more forceful than a forward one. Sweetness of temper and softness of tone have a strong way of their own. It gives one a sense of security to know that there are those who, while they possess life and vitality, are not always torturing someone with their tempers and vociferousness. But just see what we have discovered beneath this gentle exterior. A quiet but effervescent humor and a keen appreciation of practical and wholesome jokes becomes very evident. It is a delightfully compensating attribute, and has won for Alma the nickname of "Giggles". She is all for sharing her fun with others, and has often been a source of entertainment through her clever little character portraits and imitations.

Alma claims that she wants to teach, but we have visions of her in a little home of her own, a model of domesticity and happiness.

Arlene, just this last year, has most quietly and unobtrusively accepted her place as a member of Lebanon Valley. It is far from easy to try to acustom one's self to new surroundings, to pick up the dropped threads, and weave again in perfect harmony. But she would put many of us to shame by her most diligent application and genuine effort to succeed. Misfortune and stumbling blocks of all descriptions do not abandon her from her purpose.

She is earnest and anxious to share her knowledge, even though she is modest and unassuming.

While she does not participate in the sports, this does not dull her keen love of watching all physical matches and rivalries. She shows us an open and frank nature, appreciative and ready to take her place on the benches, and do her bit of cheering whatever combatants are before her.

Because she loves children and therefore must understand them, we feel assured of her success as a teacher.

'Tis a wise saying, "Drive on your own track."

"Guss" is an outstanding athlete of Lebanon Valley College. He has been a member of the varsity football and baseball squads for three years, and shows great ability in both sports. When "Guss" runs the ball, his weight and determination make possible many a gain; his pitching arm, too, has shown many a team the road to victory.

He is quiet, with a silence that is forceful. Some people are garrulous; others say little and mean much. "Guss" strikes between the two types. You cannot understand his quietness until he speaks, for rarely does he waste any words.

Having studied under the exacting eye of Dr. Reynolds for three years, we are sure that in a short time his reputation as a teacher and coach will be of renown.

It is glorious to have fine standards, and to be a person of principle, but it avails neither the world nor ourselves unless we live up to them. Edna is dominated by them, and we extend a congratulatory hand to praise her for it.

"Eddie" is from a family renowned for teaching, and L. V. will be proud to claim her as one of its future graduates and representatives. We know that she is a lover of books, and just look at her excellent marks. She has shown us what counts, and that it pays to have a high goal.

Upon seeing her smile we realize that she is truly one of us, and is always ready and willing to do her part. But will you believe us when we tell you that she is a musician of no little note, and that her family are all most vitally interested in music? This utter lack of sophistication is so refreshing and reviving as to be almost ingenious.

But do not be misled, for, in spite of this readiness for fun and this appreciation for frolic and mischief, Sara possesses a calm, calculating mind. She is most thorough and faithful in all her duties, remarkably observing details and constantly surprising one with her speculations upon hidden characteristics of her acquaintances or even of every day experiences.

These worthy composites of nature will be most invaluable in connection with her future plans for social service.

"Live and think."

Lebanon Valley has a genius in the person of Russell E. Etter. Our none too adept brain is at the end of its none too plenteous wit, and our pen is more than ordinarily dull, when set to the task of reproducing Etter's character. It is the blending of brilliancy and common sense with one hundred per cent of application, that enabled him to maintain an average of a straight "A" for three years' work. To try to anticipate this gentleman's thoughts or actions is far above a normal person's grasp, in fact, it borders on the impossible.

The man is yet to be seen that will hold the upper hand on Russell in debating, for when he speaks, it is as listening to revelations from the tongue of Socrates.

Etter is already playing an active roll in religious work, and will probably some day be a bishop.

Her judgment of character is so true and clever that one may well feel uneasy in her presence. Her fluency of thought is, of course, essentially inherent, but expression has been embellished by her tireless study and desire for clearness. In addition, she is endowed with the most reliable memory.

We were a little afraid of the stoical attitude that Ethel at first presented to us. Stoicism, inherited from her Indian ancestors, is a quality of no little value. She might well be proud of this blood, for were not the Indians the real Americans? Now, however, she has removed the barriers, and we are enabled to know her better. Just ask her sometime, and you will see that her conclusions are fair and broadminded, but very decisive. She has, also, an endless ambition to make the most of every minute of the day, and when others are idling away time in raucous enjoyment, we find her seated at her desk studying, or employed in some useful, self-assigned task. Must we not all concede that this is an infrequent record to have established in dormitory life?

However, her own ambitions do not dim her loyalty to her class, and, when inter-class basketball among the co-eds starts, Effie's eyes shine with anticipation.

"His mind his kingdom, and his will his law."

Artz is one of the quiet men in the Junior class, but we can't help mentioning that old adage, "still waters run deep". We can be certain that there is much of this man which is not on the surface. He is seldom seen loafing for he is kept very, very busy.

Lick is a good all around student, especially in history. He is a bear for punishment in this subject, amazing the profs more than once in a day with his ready answer for every question. We expect him to be an authority in his line some day, for a great amount of study and application must some day receive a just reward.

Artz's big failing is believing everything that everyone tells him. We'll never forget his wearing a full dress suit to the Christmas banquet when we were Frosh. But, "you can fool all of the people some of the time."

History KAN

"Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale her infinite variety."

Margaret has a spirit almost as restless and roving as that of the great Cleopatra herself. It is rather a pity that "Peg" had to live in such a day and age when sophistication and conventionality is so rife, for one cannot help but feel that if she could only be freed from the natural bonds of our urbanized life, she would be happiest in roaming about at her own free will, dreaming her own dreams. Now, almost her only outlet is to drive a car. It is natural that one of her nature should love to get into the big Packard and go.

"Peg" is vivacious, and according to her mood can be most happy in a crowd of young folks. She is very frank whenever occasion demands, but is not at all lacking in sympathy and interest. One does well to be able to call her friend.

The light of kindness and helpfulness glows from Ruth's face. Even the most timid of folk would not hesitate at approaching her, seeking her opinion, asking her counsel and advice, gaining her approval. It did not take her class members long to discover a great amount of ability as well as willingness to serve. The beauty of it is, she gains a great pleasure while doing something for others; the pity of it is, their burdens become hers. We like the way Ruth, even though she is a day student, has kept in close touch with school and class activities.

There is something else about "Ruthie" that casual observers would not notice—a gay, careless spirit of adventure, a forwarding quality of progressiveness inherited from her Teuton fathers. She is usually surprising one with her firm yet broad visions of past, present and future—in short, of life in general.

"Crafty men condemn studies; simple men admire them; and wise men use them."

Edgar was heard to make the remark, "Education makes a good man better, and a bad man worse, so here goes for better or worse." Then he came to college. We need not tell you how the adage has worked in the case, for one look at his picture should prove the answer.

For some young people, college is but a means of spending four years of your life without much exertion. Not so with Edgar however, for he believes in preparing himself for the future. He started his studies here with the intention of becoming a teacher, but later found that an M. D. would look much better after his name. Judging by the energy that he is putting into his work, he will be the renowned "Doctor Meiser" in a short time.

But, putting all fun aside, there is much of value in Parsons, and, as his talents become more and more developed, he will some day be heralded as a great leader in his chosen profession of medicine. That is, of course, if this confounded jazz doesn't turn his head.

And yet, we find her decidedly a woman of moods which makes her an intriguing subject. We are made to feel that she has gained knowledge, not through experience, but rather through close observation and clever analysis. Her conclusions are exact, but cold, as is her reasoning in regards to all phases of life. We are made to feel her capabilities, and consequently try to confer duties upon her that would be beneficial to all. Look at them, in turn, and tell us what you see, for they most certainly reveal to us the rapidly changing moods that are pictured there, betraying an artist's temperament, a lover of music and the beautiful. One further discovers balancing qualities of independence and sincerity. Somehow you feel that she would not hesitate to tell you just what she thought. Sophomore Class History

A CALM and peaceful atmosphere pervaded L. V. C. when the Class of '32 entered this institution. What a glorious feeling we had when our class assembled to organize as the Freshmen! We were very proud indeed, but felt very small and insignificant on our first appearance in chapel with the upperclassmen.

Rivalry soon developed between the Sophomores and the Freshmen. With much pep and great enthusiasm, we entered the contests. Although we lost both the Scrap and the Tug, our ardor was not dampened. The next encounter was the football game. We proved our superiority by defeating the Sophomores 25-0. However, they showed their strength when they defeated us in basketball by the score of 31-22. We had no more opportunities to avenge our defeats and, except for the initiations, midnight trips to the cemetery, and Frosh week, the friction between the two classes died down. As our first year drew to a close, we had mastered, to the best of our ability, all that was required of us.

The vacation passed swiftly and once more we found ourselves at L. V. C. We had lived successfully through the trials of our Freshman year and were now ready to assume the customs of the Sophomores.

This year, Fate was kinder to us and we won the first battle with the new Frosh. It was a hard fought battle and we discovered that the Freshmen were very strong. They turned the tables by winning the Tug, in which a greater record was set than the previous year. The laurels were evenly divided, so a scoreless football game was played. Thus far the Sophomores have tried to preserve the traditions of L. V. C. through their class spirit, and with their motto, "Perseverance Conquers", hope to keep up the good work.

The Freshman

Turning into the collegiate channel, he enters a different world. A myriad of new ideas confront him, while all of his old still cling to him. He is bewildered by the maze of conformations, and follows blindly. Pleasure is seen in a different light; he gets his first thrills of accomplishment. Breaking bone ties and setting out for himself, he discovers fallibilities in heroes, and is disappointed; he makes mistakes, corrects them and learns; he stumbles, rises, and trudges onward

Freshman Class History

LAST September, one hundred and twenty-five strangers entered these halls of erudition with divers purposes, but all driven by one force—the Will to Power. All were “green” in the collegiate sense of the word, unlearned in the ways of upperclassmen, but we had already formed a philosophy that could not be altered by a thousand fetters. We soon found that there was little difference between the studies here and those of “Prep” or High School. Had we not encountered Euclid, Shakespeare, Sudermann, Newton, Darwin, and a host of others before? Then what was the difference? Only that we were cast upon our own initiative. Some were weak, they tottered and fell, and were eliminated; the others remained.

Early in our existence we met Tradition. The painting of the town was the first product of her instigation, but many more were to follow.

The “Flag Rush” was then decreed by the Senate. After two hours of pushing, shoving, and wrestling amid grass, dirt, and grease, we emerged—the loser. Revenge, however, was not far distant. Came the day of the Tug; wet, cold, and discouraging. It was said that the Frosh had not won for years. All bode ill. But, when the day drew to a close, we returned; our hands raw, our bodies tired, but our spirits happy. We had won. Next came the football game. Four quarters of punting, bucking, tackling, and passing availed nothing, the game ending in a 0-0 tie. Many times we threatened, but always there was some slip-up.

Thus passed our Frosh days—melange of laughs and tears, banquets and contests—in that state of abjection which seemed so repulsive at first, but to which we have now become accustomed. Formerly, we did not see how the upperclassmen could regard their Freshman days as the happiest of their college career, but, with the passing of time, we, too, begin to realize that this has been one of our happiest years. Only too reluctantly we stand a year nearer the day when we leave the halls of our Alma Mater to combat with the Universe that lurks beyond.

MEN'S QUARTETTE

The Club

Every soul has some sort of self-expression and expresses itself in some way, the medium of outlet varying greatly. Some find satisfaction in athletics, others in dramatics, still others in literary pursuit; a few take to music. At Lebanon Valley those who seek an outlet through music find recourse in the Men's Glee Club. This group of men, under the direction of Professor Crawford, has become one of the most popular organizations on the campus and demands the respect of everyone.

The College Glee Club was organized to promote a love for the art, to develop talent, and to represent the College by giving concerts in various cities. For this season, a very attractive and well balanced program has been prepared. In addition to the group numbers, instrumental solos, and "skit", Miss Leah Miller, as guest artist, has pleased the audiences with her soprano solos.

According to the constitution, any male student regularly matriculated in any department of the College who has been duly examined and passed by the director, may become a member. The constitution further reveals that the motto of the L. V. C. Glee Club is "L-ife, V-oice, C-ulture, G-irls, C-oncerts." From this we gather that the boys do more than sing when on their concert tours. Nevertheless, the Glee Club is primarily a musical organization and does much to develop the latent powers of our would-be carolers.

QUARTETTE

Eurydice

A college whose sole opportunities extend along scholastic lines is not a great success as such. To every soul comes a yearning, a craving for self expression—and to those who find their outlet in music, Eurydice opens her doors. For a great many years, almost since the beginning of the College, there has been a Men's Glee Club. After girls were received and welcomed into this institution, it was necessary to found a girl's Glee Club, which was first known as the Girl's Choral Club. Recently, it adapted the name of Eurydice.

Eurydice needs no introduction. The name speaks for itself as well as for the specially talented and particularly selected group of twenty girls which comprise it this year. Never before has there been such fine discrimination and selection of voices. This year marks the reign of quality over quantity, and as such marks a step forward. To Professor Crawford, who has had unlimited patience in directing these artisans, we pay tribute. This organization has always been famed for its varied program, and its individual interpretation and universal appeal to audiences. Ranging from the classics down to the old folk songs and modern versions, the music touches on all types which may please the modern audience. In addition, there is a special "skit" provided for the entertainment of all. To provide variety, there are vocal and instrumental solo numbers, and quartette and group arrangements, a diversity which adds zest to this exhibition of musical ability.

Eurydice has acquired a lasting reputation since its first appearance—hence its great demand. This year it has scheduled concerts at York, Lebanon, Red Lion, Waynesboro, and Annaville. With her versatile and well trained group, Eurydice is sure to surpass expectations and prove a credit to her sponsor.

The name of this organization suggests its purpose, namely, that representatives chosen from the student body confer with the members of the faculty on any problems which require solution. This council brings the student body closer to the professors, and binds the interests of both more securely. The individual ceases to be a puppet with no one to care for his welfare and interest; whatever complaint he has to lodge may be discussed at a student-faculty meeting and a satisfactory decision reached. This tends to maintain good will toward those in authority.

Although there is no pre-stated time at which this organization meets, it may be called together whenever any problems arise which demand attention. Those who comprise this body, in addition to the faculty members, are representatives, one chosen from each class with the exception of the Senior class. In addition, the presidents of the Y. W. C. A., Y. M. C. A., W. S. G. A., and the Men's Senate automatically become members. Since the presidents of these bodies are usually members of the Senior class, it was deemed feasible to discontinue the Senior representative.

Last year, when this organization came to life, there was little or no interest shown in it. They met but once, and no action of any consequence ensued. This year however, there is great opportunity for service. The organization is perfected and is able to cope with any obstacles that may arise. This council can be of great assistance to each and every student on the campus, and, because of its lasting value, should have the support of everyone.

The Men's Senate is an organization which commands much respect and honor on the campus. It stands for the maintenance of honor, law, and order, and is a singularly student endeavor assisted by a faculty advisory committee.

The duties of the Senate as stated in the by-laws of the Constitution are "It shall be the duty of the Senate to supervise the conduct of the men students of Lebanon Valley College, conduct in the class room excepted, and to endeavor by all means at its command to inculcate in the student body the proper respect for the rights of others and such conduct as is in keeping with the ideals of a Christian institution of learning. It shall also be the duty of the Senate to supervise and regulate all inter-class activities."

The powers of the Senate are divided into three sections: the legislative, the judicial, and the executive. For the disobedience of any of the prescribed laws, penalties are inflicted. This year a system of trial has been adapted. This allows a student accused of a default to plead either "Guilty" or "Not Guilty". If he pleads the latter, he may secure a "lawyer" for his defence, the Senate sitting in judgment. If the former, he is immediately sentenced. Student government at Lebanon Valley is secure as long as the constituency hold in proper respect its governing body—The Men's Senate.

The Women's Student Government Association has as its keynote, personal honor. With this comes a certain individual responsibility that leads to a larger moral development. Good citizenship on the college campus is one of the aims of this association. However, in order to function properly and to achieve its greatest efficiency, the cooperation of every girl is needed. Through the privileges and responsibilities of Student Government there is training for the higher principles of citizenship, such as living in harmony with others and recognizing and respecting the authority of those about one. Evidences of social interest are also shown by the fact that the W. S. G. A., in conjunction with the Men's Senate, sponsors the annual Christmas Banquet.

The executive board is composed of nine members, five of whom are seniors, two juniors, one sophomore, and one freshman, the latter having no vote. This board acts for the association in all matters of student conduct, and, whenever, penalties are necessary because of the violation of any rules, it imposes them according to the seriousness of the offense.

The Y. M. C. A. of Lebanon Valley College is the only organization on the campus which includes all of the male students. It is for everyone, and everyone should profit by belonging to it. The Y's aim on our campus is contiguous to the Y's aim wherever it is found; that being the three-fold life. These three sides, the Spiritual, Mental, and Physical natures of man, must be developed, and the Y is the only organization that can accomplish all three and do it so that man's life may be augmented to any great extent. The Y is doing its part to supply the leaders for the world of tomorrow, and is doing it in such a way that their lives may be of some real value to society.

The Y, in carrying out its program, promotes devotional meetings, discussion groups, hikes, etc. This year a new feature has been added—The Fall Conference. This was an experiment, and proved to be quite a success. The Y's problem is that of a harmonious development of the individual, and, as the constituency cooperates, this project is being accomplished.

"We, the members of the Young Women's Christian Association, unite in the desire to realize full and creative life through a growing knowledge of God. We determine to have a part in making this life possible for all people. In this task we seek to understand Jesus and follow him."

Seeking to live up to this, its purpose, the Y. W. C. A. plays a most important part in the lives of the girls of Lebanon Valley. What an inspirational value the Sunday evening devotional meetings have that cannot be obtained elsewhere on the campus! It not only endeavors to provide religious activities, but social as well. Teas and parties for the girls provide the latter. Hobby groups such as the Art and Hiking Clubs were organized to form another type of recreation. Not only does the Y. W. C. A. have its social and devotional meetings merely for the girls, but joint Sunday evening services and joint social events, among which the Student Reception is the most important, are held with the Y. M. C. A. Probably one of the outstanding achievements of the Y. W. C. A. is the Big Sister Movement, which helps all new girls over many trying situations during the first few weeks of their college life.

During this year, several new innovations were made by the Y. W. C. A. in conjunction with the Y. M. C. A. Among these were the "Fall Conference", and the procuring of chapel speakers who have given students a touch of the world outside of the campus, arousing within their minds a wholesome question mark.

The Ministerium

President	LESTER KAUFFMAN
Vice-President	H. RAY HARRIS
Secretary	FREDERICK MUND
Treasurer	HARRY ZECHMAN

The Ministerium grew out of the desire to foster spiritual life among the students of the campus and especially among those who had come to school to prepare themselves for definite Christian service. It has tried, during the twenty-two years of its existence, to keep its members in close contact with the trend of religious thought and the ideals of religious service. Sometimes it has experienced what every human effort passes through—a laxity and a tendency toward indifference. But it has survived these spells and today is filling, we believe, a definite need on the campus.

During the past months the Ministerium has been meeting with the Life Work Recruits. Under the capable leadership of the presidents of both organizations their bi-weekly meetings have been attended better and more purposeful. The increased interest has warranted the securing of prominent religious leaders to address the group. Thus, they have formed wider contacts in the church.

We look forward to the greater success of this organization. There is no greater work than the preaching of the gospel of the Christ. Jesus said, "I am come that ye may have life and that ye may have it more abundantly". We hope to carry His idealism and His Spirit to coming generations.

Student Volunteer Group

- President* RUTH COOPER
- Secretary* RUTH AGEN
- Treasurer* ETHEL HOWER

Vade Mecum, walk with me! The Student Volunteer Group has heard the call from Jesus to walk with Him throughout the world. It has heard the call of the spirit of Lebanon Valley College, bidding it to walk with her in the fields of self improvement and service.

The Student Volunteer Group has a three-fold purpose. The first and primary is the preparation of servants in a strange land. This missionary aim has borne fruitage nobly. But the goal does not end here, for the group also desires to wield a Christian influence in the home land. As such, it is felt to be an integral part of the campus. The atmosphere about the organization is purely exhaling the spirit of Lebanon Valley. The third purpose of the group is personal development, and here, too, the spirit of the school is evident in this desire for improvement. The means employed are simple. They consist of prayer and heart-to-heart discussion. In this again, the ideals inspired by Lebanon Valley are the loadstones which draw these volunteers upward and outward.

Readers Club

President	DOROTHE HYLAND
Secretary-Treasurer	HELEN HAIN
Chairman Program Committee	MARY AX
Faculty Adviser	DR. P. A. W. WALLACE

"Too much study is a weariness to the flesh." The same sage said, "Of the making of books there is no end." The Readers' Club proves the truth of both statements. In order to fully appreciate the great number of books available to men and yet to escape the weariness of academic study, this organization employs a socialized method of attack. In an informal group meeting, where each member has a voice free to express independent sentiments, some author is studied. Each one gives; each one receives.

The highest aim of Lebanon Valley College is broadening of viewpoint. There can be no doubt but that the Readers' Club wields a mighty influence in attaining this end. The authors studied differ in nationality, in atmosphere, in expression; so vicariously the readers themselves vary.

A second benefit is the interest in modern letters which the club arouses in the members. Most literature studied deal with the past. There is a tendency to discredit the modern, lauding the "good old days." But here every modern writer comes in for his own. He is criticized in the light of present trends, and not by a past golden age.

A third value is training and self expression. Absolute freedom rules in every discussion. There is no one to prescribe the fixed point of view. Thus the Readers' Club is an invaluable supplement to academic pursuits.

History Club

President WARREN BURTNER
Vice-President THEODORE FOCHT
Secretary-Treasurer MARY MCCURDY

"History is the written record of man's struggle for self realization and success." Here on our campus, the History Club is quite young, this year being the second of its development. Although this organization is as yet small, it is not inactive; its prime purpose includes four distinct objectives. The first aim is to discuss important topics bearing upon current events: social, national, and international relations which are correlated with the life of every one who desires to be a good citizen of our democratic nation. Secondly, it fosters debate and encourages the development of talent in this field. The third aim is to secure prominent speakers who are both interesting and well informed on their subjects. The last objective of this organization is to give the members training in speaking before a group of his fellow students. Those included are not only students majoring in history, but all those who are interested in keeping informed on topics of universal interest. The Club is one of the most prominent on the campus, and judging from the interest shown in it and the variety of programs presented by it, our students are becoming imbued with the great spirit of nationalism. Included as honorary members are Professors Stokes, Stevenson, Gingrich, and Butterwick.

For several years there was little or no incentive offered to debating because of the meagre interest manifested in it. Within the past two years, however, keen interest has been aroused and sustained. Due to the untiring efforts of Professors Stokes and Stevenson who coach the teams, good material has been developed, and great things are expected from the work during this year. Instead of continuing the former practice of maintaining separate teams for men and women, the talent was combined into a mixed group from which the two teams were selected. The debaters have thus pooled their abilities and have produced most excellent argument for the question at issue. If this plan is conducive to good results, it may set a precedent for future debating tactics. Lebanon Valley College is proud of her debating teams this year, and takes pride in their praiseworthy achievements. They are to be congratulated for their fine sportsmanship and their keenness in combating their opponents.

The schedule for this year is as follows:

March 3—Dual debate with Elizabethtown
 March 13—Negative team with Juniata
 March 17—Dual debate with Susquehanna
 March 26—Affirmative team with Juniata
 March 31—Affirmative team with Albright
 April 11—Negative team with Albright

Chemistry Club

President	CLARENCE NOLL
Vice-President	MARIAN HEAPS
Secretary	MILDRED SAYLOR
Treasurer	GEORGE BECKER
Faculty Adviser	DR. BENDER

The Chemistry Club was founded in the second semester of the 1928-'29 term by a number of students interested in chemistry and its practical relationship to industry. With Dr. Bender, Professor of Chemistry, assisting, various discussions of interesting topics are held every two weeks, and trips are made to neighboring industries to study the application of chemistry to manufacturing. A most interesting trip to a well-known Linoleum plant was typical of these visits. The type of work accomplished by the club is illustrated by the following student description of this trip.

"..... I was at once amazed at the sincere courtesy shown visitors. The company provided a guide who was prepared to answer all questions on the manufacturing process. The linoleum was fabricated from the crude products of linsed oil, burlap, and cork; these ingredients being secured from Spain, Scotland, and France. Linsed oil was used in the making of a cement which, when mixed with cork, furnished the basic material to be pressed on the burlap. As I followed the production of the linoleum through the many departments of the plant, I noticed that it finally took definite form and was ready for color designing. Huge presses accomplished this task, accurately printing various designs upon the material. From the presses the linoleum passed through an extended drying process. It was then ready for shipment." Certainly a trip of this nature adds practical knowledge not found in the lecture room. It is to be hoped that in the future, many similar journeys will increase the practical knowledge of our chemists.

This most recent club to be organized on our campus is destined to rival all the others of the college. The interest which has been aroused in business administration culminated in its being organized in February, when thirty-six enrolled at a dinner in North Hall. They plan to carry on their activities in much the same way as do the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs. Professor Stokes and Professor Gingrich, who are responsible in a large degree for the creation and continuance of this club, are to be complimented for the high standards of achievement made possible among the student body. During the remainder of this year, there is great promise of well balanced programs which will be made more valuable by speakers secured from outside sources. They will discuss the several angles of the business world.

This organization as such is still very young, although the number of alumni has been increasing very rapidly from the three in 1870 to one thousand five hundred and twenty-three in 1930. This is a large number, and what is more, we feel that they are all genuine men and women worthy of the name of alumni of Lebanon Valley College. Just as the college with its numerous qualified Professors has endeavored and succeeded in doing much for all its students through the years of its existence, the alumni are endeavoring to do much for the college. This association keeps the alumni and their Alma Mater in close relationship. The graduates are always welcome to come back to the college and see what it is doing. Especially do these graduates get an opportunity to see their old college acquaintances and sights when they come to the annual banquet held in the spring of the year near the college itself. Instead of there being only one big association of the college alumni, small ones have been organized in various localities. Very recently one of these organizations was formed for those graduates living in and around Philadelphia. It is the hope of the present student body that the graduates will not forget their school. They do much for it if they say only a few kind words in her behalf. May each year grow richer for those who have preceded and paved the way for their followers.

For the past number of years, it has been customary to introduce to the student body several entertainments ranging from four to six numbers extended over a certain period of time. The group of presentations is called a Star Course, it being similar to the Chataquas which have been conducted in many localities.

This year especially, those of the Star Course committee, which includes a representative from Annville, a faculty member, and nine student representatives, have been unusually active. Because of their interest in the welfare of the students, speakers have been procured both for chapel and classroom lectures. Their talks have proven most inspirational to all who have heard them. The Course for this year consisted of four numbers: John Ross Reed Company in a Musical Melange; Jesse Pugh, Humorist; "Sun-Up", a play of Carolina mountain life; and the Filipino Collegians. The committee was fortunate in securing the following men from the profit of the Course: Captain T. "Dinnie" Upton, "The Player in the Shadows" on October 9; Dr. Harry Ward of Union Theological Seminary speaking on "Plunderers, Parasites, Producers" on November 22; Dr. Camilio Osias, Filipino Congressman speaking on the "Philippine Islands" on December 5; Harry Holmes, Secretary of World Alliance for International Friendship speaking on "World Peace" on January 23; and Dr. H. H. Tweedy, Professor of Homiletics at Yale Divinity School speaking on "Religion for the College Student" on March 5.

THE FIFTY-NINTH ANNIVERSARY

"The Piper" by Josephine P. Peabody was the main attraction of Clio's celebration of their fifty-ninth anniversary on Saturday evening, November 23rd. Before the program began, the Blue and White orchestra rendered several selections. The program finally opened with the invocation by Myra Shaeffer. Gladys Knaub, the anniversary president, gave the customary speech of welcome, and invited everyone to the reception after the program. Just before the rising of the curtain, Leah Miller sang a very beautiful arrangement of vocal solos. She was accompanied by Mildred Myers at the piano. After the play had been successfully produced, and the audience had completed their applause, couples were seen wending their way toward the "Ad" Building to partake of the entertainment provided by Clio. The orchestra helped to dispel the monotony customary to receptions, and added a pleasing touch of variety.

Kappa Lambda Nu

We pay tribute to the Clionian Literary Society, the older girl's society on the campus, whose high ideals have ever been cherished by her members. The girls strive to live up to the motto, "Virtute et fide", while a wise old owl and Minerva, the goddess of wisdom, watch over and inspire them. They are all that spells talent, originality, and "pep", and often display these characteristics in programs given at the regular meetings of the society.

On the other hand, Clio is not entirely unto itself. Throughout the year it holds joint sessions with its younger sister society, Delphian, and with Kalo and Philo, the men's societies. Then there is the annual Clio circus, with its acrobats, clowns, and trained animals. This year, in conjunction with the other societies on the campus, Clio presented as its opening program for the new students, "The Wedding of the Painted Doll", which was very cleverly portrayed.

The crowning event of the year for Clio is the celebration of its anniversary with a play and reception given for its many friends. In its production of this year, Clio not only equalled, but far surpassed the standards of past years. This year, in order to continue its cherished traditions and high ideals, the society required prospective members to prove their worth and willingness before being accepted. With such high aims, Clio cannot fail to achieve its purpose—to further the existence of a society of girls with common interests and ideals, and the making of contacts which will endure throughout life.

THE EIGHTH ANNIVERSARY

This year a most unusual coincidence occurred at Delphian's eighth anniversary celebration. It was found that they were celebrating not only their own birthday, but also that of George Washington. Accordingly, in honor of the occasion, the play, "The Truth" by Clyde Fitch was presented under the successful direction of Miss Wallace. The Blue and White orchestra opened the program with several selections. As a novelty feature this year, the curtains parted showing Miss Hughes, Bernita Strebis, Hester Thompson, and Olive Weigel seated in comfortable chairs upon the stage. Miss Hughes formally opened the program by delivering the invocation. Bernita Strebis, anniversary president, followed with an address of welcome. Hester Thompson then rendered several beautiful solos, accompanied at the piano by Olive Weigel. The play was then presented, receiving due appreciation from the audience. After an evening well spent, many concluded it properly by attending the reception in the "gym", where the shaded lights, the palms and the portraits of George Washington contributed to an already pleasant atmosphere. The refreshments served were also in keeping with the Delphian—Washington dual celebration.

*"We may build more splendid habitations,
Fill our rooms with paintings and with sculptures,
But we cannot Buy with gold the old associations!"*

To that spirit which ennobles us and raises us from our meaner selves; to that spirit which helps to make us the social creatures we were intended to be; to thee, O Spirit of Delphi, we make obeisance.

Although this society is the youngest on the campus, although Delphian did not come to its full fruition in one night, nevertheless, the labors and toils of those who fought to attain their ideals have not been in vain. Behold Delphian today, crowning her past success by attaining a long desired need—her new meeting hall. With the growth of Delphian each consecutive year, the old hall above the Library became inadequate. Unceasing petitions resulted in the acquisition of the old kindergarten room in South Hall. Since it has been remodeled and modernized, this charming hall has created greater enthusiasm among the girls, and great results are expected.

This year, Delphian innovated the novel by producing "Miss Caruther's Return", an operetta featuring the musical talent of the society. The reception this year was more elaborate than ever before, and due to the charm of the orchestra, many wended their way to the gymnasium to renew "Auld Lang Syne".

Delphian's growth has been rapid, for she has increased her membership from six to ten times that many in less than ten years. With such a promising career, she cannot retrace her steps nor erase from the pages of Lebanon Valley's history the impression she has made therein. With her torch undimmed, she passes on to each girl her standard, and requires only unswerving loyalty and obedience to the ideals which make for a happier and fuller comprehension of life, and appreciation for the noble strivings of each individual. "May your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your God which is in Heaven."

THE FIFTY-THIRD ANNIVERSARY

Something unique in the line of Kalo's fifty-third anniversary held on Saturday, April 5th was the presentation of three one-act plays replacing the longer play which for several years has predominated in the society anniversaries. Miss Mary K. Wallace is to be complimented upon her original choice and suggestions, for novelty is always desired. As Kalo is quite a musically talented organization, the music was in keeping with its reputation. After several selections by the orchestra, the program was opened with an invocation by Reverend Gibble. Edgar Shroyer, anniversary president, followed by extending a hearty welcome to all and urged everyone to attend the reception. Then came the presentation of each of the following plays: "The Glittering Gate" by Lord Dunsaney, "Thursday Night" by Christopher Morley, and "Moonshine" by Arthur Hopkins. All declared the plays to be quite unusual and fascinating. Afterwards, many found their way to the "gym" where the usual climax to an already happy evening was enjoyed.

Kappa Lambda Sigma

In his "The Idea of a University", Newman inculcated one of the principal virtues of Kalo. The following excerpt from the essay is applicable. "When a multitude of young men, keen, open-hearted, sympathetic, and observant, as young men are, come together and freely mix with each other, they are sure to learn from one another, even if there be no one to teach them; the conversation of all is a series of lectures to each, and they gain for themselves new ideas and views, fresh matter of thought, and distinct principles for judging and acting, day by day."

When Kalo meets, there is an atmosphere of dignity and reverence despite the fact that everyone feels at ease. The traditions of the society and the manifest good will and reputation of those who have preceded the present membership stands as a testimonial of character and worth. The aims and ideals of Kalo serve as a constructive incentive to those men who believe that there is more to a college education than the prescribed course of study. However, Kalo is not a twentieth-century edition of Dr. Johnson's "Club". It does not try to imitate the genius of that organization. The society is a group of ambitious young men who are all endeavoring to master the secrets of mind, body, and nature. It is composed of business men, athletes, ministers, physicians, teachers, and scientists—all in the making.

Kalo has the welfare of the College at heart and contributes unrestrainedly in supplying extra-curricular diversions for students and faculty. With the cooperation of all living Kalos, this institution will survive the memory of this generation of loyal supporters and will be indelibly engraved among the glorious wealth of traditions of our Alma Mater.

THE SIXTY-SECOND ANNIVERSARY

Philo celebrated its Sixty-second anniversary on Friday, May 2, 1929, when one of the master productions of the year, "Saint Joan" was produced. The program was opened with the invocation delivered by J. Bruce Behney, who in 1928 had the leading role of Cyrano. After this, Russel Oyer, anniversary president, greeted all present and invited them to the gymnasium for the reception. As the play to be presented was of unusual length, no special musical number had been prepared. Presently the curtain rose upon one of the magnificent scenes from "Saint Joan". The play gripped all of the spectators, and the diversity of talent displayed was exceptional. After the curtain lowered upon the last act, the majority of those present retired to the "Gym" to renew "Auld Lang Syne" and to enjoy the prepared treat.

Phi Lambda Sigma

The beginning of each school term finds a new group of young people thrust into the social and academic activities of Lebanon Valley College. These students begin their college career by participating in studies and athletics, and in the molding of life-long friendships with their new acquaintances. However, in order to improve, and at the same time enjoy their sojourn to the fullest extent, they affiliate themselves with one or the other of the literary societies on our campus.

The end of each school term finds a similar, though somewhat altered group emerging from the halls of Lebanon Valley; the finished product of four years of instruction in the mental, social, and literary fields of college life. Their literary as well as a large part of their social training was received in the halls of our literary societies, one of which is Philo, an important and indispensable factor. Her graduate members never fail to attribute a large degree of the success they have attained to the preparation with which Philo has fitted them.

At present, Philo is enjoying a large degree of success. High standards of morality and scholastic accomplishments are being maintained. A versatile group of young men including athletes, senators, musicians, scientists, future ministers, teachers, and professional men constitute the large enrollment. A beautiful hall, the finest on the campus, is the result of the unselfish and determining efforts of the members. Although blessed with tradition, and with splendid facilities for her continued existence, Philo is not resting on her oars, but is always striving towards greater goals and the perfection of ideals of culture and friendship. We feel sure that her future will gloriously eclipse her already brilliant past; that as our Alma Mater grows, so also will Philo's spirit and influence, and that her results will justify her motto: "To be rather than to seem to be."

“Les Causieres”

The parlez-vous can now be heard not only in class rooms allotted to French, but every Wednesday evening, when a select group of Seniors who are majoring or minor- ing in French, and a limited number of Juniors who are taking the advanced French courses congregate at the home of Madame Johnson to enjoy an hour en parlant seulement en francais. This organization is but an expression of the activity of the French department of the college.

This French circle, having dubbed themselves “Les Causières” (“The Conversa- tionalists”), is not an organized group. They have not elected officers, but meet as a social group of like-minded individuals to acquire a smooth and easy diction in this Romantic tongue. A program of some nature is prepared for each meeting, and all who participate are expected to come ready to present some anecdote or short story en francais. This organization, though not organized, adds to the value of the French courses of the college, and is a real value to those who must talk for themselves in years to come.

The German language is a tongue with a history. The Reformers used it to scatter religious convictions, the Scientists used it to propound discovered truths, and the world's foremost artists used it to utter their heart's longings. It is an individualistic tongue. Teutonic languages are the least based on the ancient classical Latin. The Ger- man language is an expressive tongue, and in it the finest intricacies of logic, the most burning passions, and the keenest wit can be expressed. The Germans are a philosophic people, but how merry they can be!

It is with such reflection as a basis that the German Union has been established. Believing that a study of the language and customs can be profitable for a broadening of the student's viewpoint, a few far-sighted persons have given great effort to the organi- zation of this group. The members meet for an informal fellowship, during which a German conversation is maintained. A program of general literary value is presented, and an attempt is made to reach the root of the German mind through the dramatization of German literature. German music above all demands attention.

Great things are expected. Die Welt zu kennen beisst sich selber zu kenner. Sich selber zu kenner beisst Gott zu.

MISS MARY K. WALLACE

This publication which appears weekly containing the current events of the day, the local news of our campus and news from beyond our campus, the features and editorials,—and we must not forget the "Joe Dawg-Gawn" column—is La Vie Collegienne. This year the college paper celebrates its forty-first birthday, but since being founded, there has been many a change and revision. Until 1925, when the paper acquired its new name which it still retains, it was edited under four different titles. In the course of years, the paper has evolved from a faculty production to a student creation with faculty supervision. Several times the paper seemed doomed to pass into oblivion, but fate always intervened. Today, L. V. C. is proud to be a member of the Inter-Collegiate Newspaper Association of the Middle Atlantic States.

This year, for the first time in years, a woman—Esther Angstadt—was editor-in-chief, proving the dictum that "there is nothing under the sun that man can do that woman will not attempt to do". Due to her untiring efforts and keen executive ability, the paper was issued weekly instead of bi-weekly, as formerly. Great things have been achieved in the past history of our college paper, and marked improvements have raised its standards higher than ever before. It is for us of Lebanon Valley today to carry on the work of our predecessors, and, with our humble contributions, attempt to pass the light undimmed to others following.

Publications

Literary productions mean concentrated time and effort. The section of the book which has just been completed is a resumé, in brief, of those who have cooperated to maintain the scholastic standards of our Alma Mater, of those who have dedicated many hours of work and unlimited patience to bring into creation that which serves as a monument of achievement. Whatever gives life and vigor to a student body must be something that satisfies and meets all demands. The school paper provides for a record of the transitory events of the campus; the annual is a compilation of the outstanding episodes of the year.

La Vie was honored by being admitted into the Inter-Collegiate Newspaper Association in 1929. This association holds conventions bi-annually at which time representatives from many colleges assemble to compare data concerning their respective problems, offer constructive criticism, and give suggestions for improvements. La Vie has evolved from a humble pamphlet published bi-monthly by faculty members to its present status. The name has been changed five times: first The College Forum, then The Forum, followed by College News, succeeded by The Crucible, and finally La Vie Collegienne.

The Quittapahilla, our annual, provides an outlet for creative genius and originality, and serves as a golden link in the chain of college days. In the year 1898 the first annual was published under the name of Bizarre. In 1916 it became the Quittapahilla, titled thus in commemoration of the famous stream which has become a part of Lebanon Valley. With each passing year the Quittie becomes more valuable, a priceless gem with which none would wish to part, a tie which binds us closer to our Alma Mater and makes us feel more intimately that life within a life which never dies.

Dramatics

The Private Secretary

"The Private Secretary" by Charles Hawtreay, a three-act farcical comedy given by the Junior Class under the direction of Dr. P. A. W. Wallace, lived up to its reputation as a hilarious comedy by bringing constant peals of laughter from the audience. As a synopsis:

Mr. Marsland, a well-to-do gentleman has engaged, by letter, the Reverend Robert Spalding of New York City, as his private secretary. He is to arrive in Pine Grove accompanied by Mr. Marsland's nephew, Harry. Before leaving New York, Harry stops at the home of a friend, Douglas Cattermole, who is trying to run up numerous bills simply because his domineering uncle insists that he will disinherit him unless he "sows his wild oats." Harry invites Douglas to come to his uncle's home as the private secretary, leaving the real secretary in the apartments. As a result, Mr. Spalding is mistaken for Douglas by the uncle. Further complications deepen the plot, which finally culminates in a happy ending.

Mr. Robert Eshleman as the private secretary, played his role with remarkable ability, adding the many eccentricities required for the part. Mr. Earl Wolf as Mr. Cattermole did as much justice to his part. It was the Misses Dorothy Thompson and Sara Ensminger playing opposite Robert Roudabush and Russell Morgan in the roles of Edith and Evan, Douglas and Harry respectively, who added the normal buoyancy of youth. Miss Caroline Fisher in the role of the superstitious Miss Ashford; Miss Ruth Liller as the fussy old landlady, Mrs. Stead; Alexander Grant as Gibson, the tailor; Joseph Hutchison as Mr. Marsland; William Spangler as the servant; and Dean Salada as the detective, comprised the remainder of the cast.

After its immense success on the campus, the Juniors presented this play to a large audience in Hershey. There it met with the same approval.

Saint Joan

For its sixty-second anniversary play, the Philokosmian Literary Society very successfully presented Bernard Shaw's interpretation of the Maid of Orleans in the chronicle play entitled "Saint Joan". The play was under the direction of Dr. P. A. W. Wallace.

The story of "Saint Joan" is obvious. The play was a vivid portrayal of medieval history, beginning with Joan as a poor, ignorant, country lass, listening to her voices, and following their admonition until she is burned at the stake. Many animated scenes of her life were depicted, the most effective of which was the trial. In this was portrayed the absolute sincerity and simplicity of Joan in contrast to the haughty self-important officials of the church who deemed it absolutely necessary to carry out the law verbatim.

Miss Leah Harpel interpreted the character of Joan with remarkable dexterity, portraying the simplicity of the country girl, the daring leader in charge of the army, and the audacity required during the trial, with the versatility of a professional. The humor of the play was presented by the Dauphin, whose role was very well characterized by Mr. Russell Oyer. The remainder of the cast were Captain Robert de Baudricourt, Glenn Bendigo; Bertrand de Poulengy, Calvin Keene; Archbishop, Earl Wolf; Duke, Edgar Hertzler; Bluebeard, John Beattie; Captain La Hire, John Snyder; The Duchess, Florence Miller; Lady-in-waiting, Elizabeth Matthes; Dunois, Kermit Taylor; Earl, Paul Evancoe; Bishop, Paul Barnhart; Canon de Courcelles, Elwood Meyers; Executioner, Francis Barr; Soldiers, Fred Christman, Charles Bartolet, and Luther Rearick; Steward, Paul Barnhart; Pages, Paul Kenne, and Jesse Brown; and a gentleman of today, Albert Sitlinger.

The Piper

As a fitting culmination of fifty-nine years of history, the Clionian Literary Society presented J. P. Peabody's "The Piper", under the direction of Miss Mary K. Wallace. It was not a dramatization of Browning's poem, but a serious drama, the plot of which was based on the refusal of the townspeople to pay the Piper. Instead of the Piper being depicted as a mere imposter, he is represented rather as a poet and one who appreciated nature. Since he has charmed the children to follow him inside the "Hollow Hill", Veronika, a foreign woman, pleads for the return of her crippled son, Jan. After considerable deliberation before the crucifix, the Piper is influenced to return Jan to his mother, and finally all of the children to their parents.

The play was unique in that Clio girls took both the male and female roles, a feat here-to-fore unattempted on the campus. Miss Madeline Rife as the Piper, portrayed excellently the dual personality of assertiveness before the townspeople and idealism before the wayside crucifix. Misses Anna Kiehl and Lolita Mummert represented the love theme in the roles of Barbara and Michael. The remainder of the cast included Cheat-The-Devil, Irene Peter; Strollers, Olive Morrow, Lenora Bender, and Miriam Sylvius; the people of Hamlin: the Burgomeister, Mary McCurdy; Syndic, Fae Bachman; Cobbler, Ann Esbshade; Butcher, Hilda Hess; Smith, Mary Rupp; Watchman, Dorotheie Hyland; Sacristan, Helen Kauffman; Priest, Mary Witmer; Old Claus, Mae Fauth; Town Crier, Eulalie Morton; Veronika, Anne Gordon; Butcher's wife, Meredith Rice; Smith's wife, Margaret Smyser; Watchman's wife, Corinne Dyne; Old Ursula, Josephine Yake. The minor roles of Nuns, Priests, and children were taken by other Clio girls, assisted by several children from town.

The Truth

The Delphian Literary Society successfully presented on her eighth anniversary, a four-act drama, "The Truth", by Clyde Fitch. It was under the direction of Miss Mary Kathryn Wallace.

The plot centered about Tom and Becky Warder, who had lived happily together for six years. Tom, an honest, straight-forward, and unsuspecting young man, was admired by all and had complete confidence in his wife. Becky, a loveable and vivacious young woman, had, in spite of her many fine qualities, the unfortunate habit of not telling the truth, a characteristic which implicated her in many perplexing situations. Mrs. Lindon, a nervous and extremely sensitive woman, had left her husband because of infidelity on his part. It is she who accused Becky of untruthfulness. From that time, Becky became more and more involved in situations until they resulted in her husband's leaving her because he could no longer trust her. At the home of her father she learned the disaster of untruthfulness and repented.

Miss Bernita Strebig in the role of Becky gave a very vivid portrayal of that character. The part of Tom could not have been better handled than it was by Mr. Calvin Keene. Miss Trula Koch played an exceedingly difficult role in the character of Mrs. Crespigny, the social climber, and played it well. Another difficult characterization was interpreted by Mr. Frederick Rhoads as Stephen Roland, who was the realization of the fate to which Becky was headed. The remainder of the cast in the personnel of Miss Eva Peck as Mrs. Lindon, Mr. Gardner Saylor as Fred Lindon, Miss Mary Elizabeth Stephens as Laura Fraser, Mr. Clarence Earley as the messenger boy, and Miss Dorothy Forry as the servant of the Warders, did as much justice to their roles.

EMMELINE MAY SHAFFER

Queen of the May

In celebration of the annual May Day fete, the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. presented "May Day in Merrie England, 1596" on May 4, 1929. It was planned and directed by Miss Mary Kathryn Wallace.

MAY DAY

Kalo Plays

Quite a varied program was presented by the Kalozetean Literary Society on their fifty-third anniversary, when, instead of enacting a continuous drama, they presented three one-act plays under the direction of Miss Mary Kathryn Wallace. The first of these plays, Dunsaney's "The Glittering Gate", depicted the life of two burglars in the underworld, showing that even after death they retained the characteristics which they had while on earth. The two roles were very excellently interpreted by Mr. John Morris and Mr. Frederick Rhoads respectively.

From this lonely setting the audience was taken to a modern home, the scene of Morley's "Thursday Night". In it was pictured the life of a couple who were quarreling over the time-worn question of mothers-in-law. The two mothers, discovering the quarrel, wisely decided to remedy it. Upon assuring themselves that Gordon and Laura Johns were listening, they feigned an angry dispute which resulted in the reconciliation of the couple. The role of Laura Johns was interpreted in a very charming manner by Miss Anna Kiehl. Mr. Edgar Shroyer, as Gordon Johns, portrayed the part with his usual dramatic ability. The remaining roles, Mrs. Sheffield, the mother of Laura, and Mrs. Johns, the mother of Gordon, were excellently portrayed by Misses Eva Peck and Trula Koch respectively.

Hopkin's "Moonshine" provided a distinctive change from the previous two plays. The setting was in the Kentucky mountains. The ingenuity of the revenue officer, Jim Dunn, against that of the moonshiner, was portrayed in the skillful manner in which he saved his own life. Mr. Joseph Hutchison and Mr. William Spieg enacted their roles as the revenue officer and moonshiner in a very capable manner.

The Truth About Blayds

The Class of 1928 established the custom of presenting a student-coached Senior class play. Following this custom, the class of 1929 presented A. A. Milne's comedy, "The Truth About Blayds", under the direction of Mr. Henry Aungst. The play centers about Oliver Blayds, famous because of his youthful poetry, who tells his daughter on the day of his death that the poetry was not his, but that of a friend who had died seventy years before that time. Amusing incidents follow as each member of the family contradicts in his own way the validity of the statement. The following comprised the cast: Oliver Blayds, Archie Lutz; Isobel, Florence Miller; Marion Blayds Conway, Carol Brinser; William Blayds Conway, John Beattie; Oliver Blayds Conway and Septima Blayds Conway, the grandchildren, Russel Oyer and Ruth Light; and A. L. Royce, Miles Kichner.

Christmas Pageant

One of the several ways in which the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. celebrated the birth of Christ was through the presentation of a pageant-cantata entitled "The Heavenly Host". It was directed by Miss Anne Gordon and Mr. Warren Burtner, with Mrs. Bender taking charge of the choruses. The pageant was introduced by an organ prelude by Mildred Myers, after which were enacted numerous scenes depicting the Christmas Story from the time the angel Gabriel foretold the birth until the flight into Egypt. Edgar Shroyer as Gabriel showed unusual ability in his handling of the solos, as did also Irene Peter as Mary. Earl Wolf as liturgist displayed his ability in his usual manner. The choruses by the angels and Wise Men were well rendered, and added delightfully to the scenes as they were presented.

The Striking of America's Hour

Along with the major productions of the year, there were several minor ones which were very efficiently coached by student directors. One of the most outstanding was "The Striking of America's Hour", a pageant depicting America facing the trials experienced by preceding great nations, which trials led to their downfall. One was carried back to the days of the Greek, Roman, and Babylonian empires as various persons interpreted the roles of these nations appearing before Liberty, Justice, and the Spirit of Brotherhood. After judgment had been passed upon them, America entered, bringing with her the problems which she faces today—Child Labor, illiteracy, poverty, et cetera—all of which beckon her to the fate of her predecessors. However, prompted by the spirit of Christian love, the doctor, nurse, teacher, and Play all did their share in releasing mankind from bondage. The pageant reached its climax in the appearance of the cross, the symbol of freedom through sacrifice. An unusually large cast was required for this production, and it was very ably directed by Miss Madeline Rife and Mr. Gardner Saylor. The stage setting was very simple, but the costuming added greatly to the beauty of the production. A student choir directed by Mrs. Ruth Engle Bender added that touch which only music can give.

Appreciation

Campus dramatics are sponsored mainly by the literary societies with the few exceptions of the Junior Class Play and several minor productions. Two distinct types of drama are presented, namely, an interpretation of life as the modern dramatist sees it, and an interpretation of historical life as depicted by both the old and new dramatists. Thus, an unusually high standard is maintained. Much of the credit for this high standard is due to the two very capable directors, who, with untiring efforts, meet with their casts to shape the plays. These two directors are Dr. P. A. W. Wallace, head of the English department, and Miss Mary Kathryn Wallace, associate professor of English. In Dr. Wallace we see a quiet vitality which comes from the sheer joy of living, and this quality shines through his productions. The productions of Miss Wallace show also a characteristic of the director, that of the artist's enthusiasm. It is this enthusiasm which makes her efforts not in vain. The work of these two professors is more than highly appreciated, and the entire student body joins in expressing that appreciation.

Secretary	P. S. WAGNER

Coach	E. E. MYLIN
Faculty Member	C. R. GINGRICH

This council has been functioning since 1919, having as its purpose the regulation and supervision of all athletics at Lebanon Valley College. It meets in regular session once a month, holding special meetings as occasion requires. The athletic council is one of the instruments of the institution that is necessary to avoid friction in the handling of college athletics.

"Hooks" MYLIN, Coach

With competition as keen as it is in present day college athletics, a fighting team must have a director who can obtain the maximum cooperation, skill, and enthusiasm from the men. We see the accomplishment of this in "Hooks". During the past six years, he had produced some of the best teams we have ever had, and has placed Lebanon Valley among the leaders in college sports.

"Hooks" is a graduate of F. and M., receiving his A.B. there in 1916. After graduation, he had charge of athletics in the 79th Division, A. E. F. (1917), and of Iowa State College from 1920 to 1923. Coming to Lebanon Valley in the fall of 1923, he at once became popular with students, faculty, and alumni. His coaching ability has attracted considerable attention in the leading colleges of the east.

C. LEROY MACKERT

Assistant Director of Athletics

Left without the able assistant coaches of the previous year, "Hooks" Mylin sent out an S. O. S. for aid. C. LeRoy Mackert, now an applicant for Ph.D. in Physical Education at Columbia, generously offered himself to the call of his Alma Mater. As he is a coach well adapted to his field, it was soon evident that our staff was the most efficient in years. His ability as a coach is recognized by the outstanding college circles. Mackert is a man with an attractive personality, and is one of the greatest athletes ever produced at Lebanon Valley. After spending three years in the Academy, he matriculated in our college department, graduating in 1917. He received his A.B. at the university of Maryland in 1921; in 1924 he was honored with his M.A. by the same institution.

THE 'OLE FIGHT

These are the boys that inject inspiration into the crowd when the tide of battle runs low, and lead the long raahs when one of our conquering heroes crosses the white line or whips the cords. Throughout the year, under the capable leadership of Hertzler; Roudabush, Krumbiegel, and Earley have been loyally attending their duties as yell leaders.

The present "L" Club was organized in 1923. The only requirements for one aspiring to membership in this body is that he be a male who has won the varsity "L", which accomplishment is in itself quite an honor. Many meetings of the club are held, which help to keep the members in closer contact with the varied activities of the organization. It acts as sponsor for inter-class athletic contests, the most important of which is the basketball league. However, it not only supports athletic activities, but social affairs as well. The club is to be complimented on its rapid growth, not only in membership, but also in activities on our campus. Although the constituency is limited to the comparative few, those of the less fortunate students join in wishing our "L" Club a most successful future.

It seems proper to here mention the regret of the entire student body that Samuel Zappia, able captain of our football team and star pitcher of our baseball team, was forced to leave school on account of illness. To Sam go our best wishes for a rapid recovery, and our thanks for all that he has given to L. V. C. in athletics.

The Season

Lebanon Valley 13 Villanova 32

Under a boiling September sun the Lebanon Valley gridmen opened their season at Villanova, scarcely three weeks after their return to college. Although unsuccessful in their first encounter, the Mylinites made a fine showing against the more experienced Wildcat team, coming out of the skirmish with a 13-32 score. Many weaknesses were evident in both the defense and the offense.

Bartolet, Lechthaler, and Heller were the bulwark of the Lebanon Valley line. These three boys played their second year on the varsity, and showed a world of improvement over their playing of last year.

In the third quarter Heller, fleet of foot and sure of hand, snatched a pass out of the air and dashed across the goal line for the first Lebanon Valley score. A pass to Daub netted the extra point.

In the fourth quarter, Sweeney Light, who replaced Daub, furnished the real thrill of the afternoon by intercepting a pass on his own fifteen yard line and after a brilliant run for 85 yards, crossed the goal line for the final points of the day.

Gillespie, one of the greatest athletes that ever donned football togs at Villanova, impressed the stands time and time again with his brilliant broken field running. He proved to be the bulwark of the Villanova team.

Lebanon Valley 0 Penn State 15

Traveling to State College, Lebanon Valley's Football Warriors proved their calibre when they held the powerful Nittany Lions to a 15-0 score. On receiving the opening kick-off, Diedrich, the Nittany star carried the ball back 65 yards before he was tackled. A succession of line bucks and end runs netted State their first score. Coach Mylin substituted an entire new team at the half, evidently saving the regulars for the Franklin and Marshall game. This team surprised both the Lebanon Valley and State rooters by holding the State team to a single touchdown during the remainder of the game.

Swope, Daub, and Albright starred for the Mylinites in the backfield, while Bartolet and Kelly were the strong spots in the line. Deidrich was the big gun in the State offense, racing off tackle time and again for substantial gains. His runback of the opening kick-off paved the way for the first score, and his forward pass to French accounted for the other.

Lebanon Valley 6 Franklin and Marshall 0

Following a three day layoff from scrimmage and rebuilt in spirit and physique, a determined Lebanon Valley team journeyed to Lancaster to administer a decisive defeat to Franklin and Marshall, winning by a 6-0 score. Lebanon Valley upset all pre-game dope completely and gave the pride of Lancaster a severe jolt.

Prior to the game, the confidence of the F. and M. rooters couldn't have been shaken, but before the game was many minutes old, "eleven fighting fools" representing

L. V. C., inspired by their Coach Hooks Mylin, a former F. and M. luminary, had changed the feeling of confidence to one of anxiety.

On the opposite side of the field, the Lebanon Valley supporters were in a continuous uproar that lasted from the beginning of the game until Daub crossed the line with the winning touchdown. The enthusiasm then developed into a mild form of insanity.

The game started with Lebanon Valley's receiving the kick-off. Play continued around the middle of the field until the latter part of the first half, when F. and M. advanced to the 5 yard line. They were held there until the half ended.

Outplayed in the first half, the Mylinites came back to play rings around their opponents in the final two periods. The Lebanon Valley boys flashed excellent team work and showed the results of careful coaching, playing wide-awake football and taking advantage of their one big opportunity to score.

In the third quarter, Lebanon Valley twice reached the nine yard line and twice tried passes, but both were fumbled. Heller dropping the first as he crossed the line, and Captain Zappia fumbled the other.

In the fourth quarter Johnson made a first down on Lebanon Valley's 35 yard line. A pass from Horst to Oakes netted 25 yards. F. and M. kicked immediately to Lebanon Valley's 33 yard line. A five yard penalty and a run by Light gave Lebanon Valley a first down. A pass, Daub to Heller, was good for another first down. A pass, Albright to Bowman, put the ball on the ten yard line. Daub, on two plunges through center, made a first down on F. and M.'s 6 yard line. Light hit center for two yards. Light and Daub failed to gain at center, making it fourth down with four yards to go. At this point Lebanon Valley pulled the prettiest and smartest play of the game. Expecting another line buck, the F. and M. secondary was drawn in. Daub skirted the left end for a score, a beautiful lateral pass from Bowman being completed. The try for the extra point, a forward pass, was grounded. This game was marked as one that held no individual stars. It was a case of eleven men giving their all for their school.

Lebanon Valley 0 Muhlenberg 7

Failing miserably to show the form that they had shown against F. and M., Lebanon Valley took an unexpected defeat from Muhlenberg 7-0. The first half was entirely Lebanon Valley's, as the Blue and White nearly scored three touchdowns. In the second half, Muhlenberg came back to play the Mylinites to a standstill.

A break in the game gave Muhlenberg their touchdown in the third quarter. The ball was on Lebanon Valley's 45 yard line at the fourth down. Muhlenberg attempted a pass, but there was no receiver near it. Lebanon Valley safety let it hit ground. The umpire claimed L. V. had interfered with the receiver, and gave Muhlenberg a first down on the five yard line. A pass to Weber netted Muhlenberg a touchdown, and the try for the extra point was successful.

In the final quarter Lebanon Valley made a desperate effort to score. Two long passes, Albright to Heller, placed the ball on the 8 yard line, but the advance was stopped when Muhlenberg held for downs.

Lebanon Valley 0 Georgetown 27

Following the disheartening defeat by Muhlenberg which tended to lower the morale of the team, Lebanon Valley journeyed to Washington, bent on staging a comeback. However, its hopes were cast to the ground by a 27-0 defeat. Although defeated, the score did not do justice to the Lebanon Valley eleven, for they succeeded in romping off with the major portion of the glory.

After piling up a 21-0 lead in the first half, Georgetown's defense crumbled, and Lebanon Valley completely outplayed the victors in the second half. The Mylinites made three long drives in the second half, all of which ended within striking distance of Georgetown's goal. The Lebanon Valley passing attack completely baffled the big Hilltop machine, but inaccurate passing when near the goal line enabled Georgetown's backs to snare passes and keep the Mylinites from scoring.

Opening a varied aerial attack in the third period, Lebanon Valley made long gains by Albright tossing spirals to Orsino. A lateral pass, with Bowman doing most of the running, also deceived the Georgetown defense. Sipe, who was substituted for Daub, thrilled the fans time and time again with some classy broken field running.

Twice in the final period, Lebanon Valley passed and ran the ball from deep in their own territory to within 20 yards of the Hilltop goal line. Near the close of the last period, Sipe carried the ball 48 yards to Georgetown's 3 yard mark in two plays, but three line plunges and a pass failed to produce a touchdown.

Lebanon Valley ○ Mount Saint Mary's ○

Outplaying their opponents in every phase of the game with the exception of punting, Lebanon Valley was held to a stalemate by a heavier Mt. St. Mary's eleven on the Bethlehem Steel Field. Lebanon Valley's defense smothered any thrust that Mt. St. Mary's offered. In stopping the terrific line plunges of their opponents, Cunjak, Lechthaler, Kazlusky, and Kelly time and again thrilled the Lebanon Valley followers.

The Lebanon Valley offense functioned smoothly until within a few yards of the goal, but each time the necessary final punch was lacking. Captain Ryscavage and McCall, ends for Mt. St. Mary's, were probably the main reason for Lebanon Valley's inability to score. These two lads prevented the Lebanon Valley backfield men from getting away for a touchdown.

Lebanon Valley 0 Albright 6

A determined Lebanon Valley eleven invaded the haunts of their ancient rivals, Albright College, formerly Schuylkill College, and came within inches of gaining revenge for last year's defeat. Fate did not smile favorably upon the Blue and White, and Albright, after having been pushed all over the field for three quarters, squeezed a lucky touchdown over the goal line on the last play of the game.

Previous to the game, Coach Julian of Albright remarked that Albright had completely outgrown Lebanon Valley, and that the outcome of the game was only a matter of how many touchdowns could be scored in the sixty minutes of play. Mylin's proteges soon showed that Julian's opinion was only a dream, and before the game was many minutes old, had that individual crossing his fingers, grasping rabbit's feet, and hunting four leaf clovers.

The scrappy Lebanon Valley line battered the heavy Albright forward wall, and time and again broke through to toss the Albright backs for a loss. For three-fourths of the game the ball was in Albright's territory, and never once did they return it beyond the fifty yard mark.

Sweeney Light knifed through tackle for telling gains and for several first downs. Jap Albright threw passes with accuracy. Bowman missed a chance to score when one of Jap's passes came in a direct line with the sun. Heller tried hard for several, but the pigskin filtered through his fingers.

Outplayed by Lebanon Valley during most of the game, the Albright team shook off its sluggishness in the waning minutes of play to keep the Mylinites from upsetting the popular opinion. Petrolonus, Lion fullback and one of the leading scorers of the East, was the hero of the fray. Dashing through center three times for a first down, Petrolonus was given the ball for the next four plunges. On the first three he advanced to the 1 yard line, and on the next thrust drove across the goal line as the whistle blew to end the game.

Lebanon Valley 7 Gettysburg 13

A crafty, powerful, tribe of balltoters invaded Gettysburg and battered the men of Bream during sixty minutes of grueling football, only to bow in submission before the determined and stubborn Gettysburgian foe.

Gettysburg was put to a most severe test in defeating the Mylinites. Throughout the encounter, Albright, the shifty back of Lebanon Valley, tore through the Bullet's line and skirted the ends for constant gains, only to crumble when within easy striking distance of the goal.

McMillan, Gettysburg speed artist, raced around end in the first eight minutes of play and ran 52 yards for the first score of the Bullets.

With a six point lead, Gettysburg found Lebanon Valley battling with all its power. On three successive occasions, Mylin's proteges advanced the ball to within the Bullet's ten yard line. Each time however, Lebanon Valley was repulsed, and at half time Gettysburg led by six points.

In the third period Lebanon Valley staged a strong offense. Albright carried the ball, Patrizio interspersed with several end runs, and Daub pushed over a touchdown. Albright passed for the extra point.

Lebanon Valley 19 U. S. Marine Corps 7

Lebanon Valley brought its football season to a glorious close, when they trounced the Quantico Marines 19-7 at Island Park, Harrisburg. Captain McNeill of the Marines won the toss and selected the south goal. Bartolet kicked off for Lebanon Valley. Long received it on the thirty yard line and fumbled. Lechthaler recovered for Lebanon Valley. On the first play, Albright tossed a thirty yard heave to Thrush, who ran the remaining five yards for a touchdown. A forward pass for the extra point failed, making the score 6-0.

On the first play of the second period with the ball on the Leatherneck's 14 yard line, Captain Zappia worked a lateral pass with Albright that was good for five yards. Light, on three successive line bucks, carried the pigskin over the goal line for the second six-pointer, making the score 12-0. The try for the extra point was successful.

Near the closing minutes of the second quarter, Lebanon Valley started a rally which led to another touchdown. Patrizio intercepted a forward pass and returned it to the Marines' 37 yard line. Then Heller grabbed one of Albright's passes out of the air and ran 30 yards for a touchdown, making the score 19-0.

Three seniors brought their football careers to a close with a blaze of a glory in this game. They were Captain Zappia, Albright, and Cunjak. All of these lads played a great game in their final college contest.

The Season

LEBANON VALLEY 3 LAFAYETTE 6

Lebanon Valley received rough treatment at the hands of Lafayette in the opening game of the season when the Blue and White was defeated 6-3. Bendigo's lusty wallop into the center field bleachers in the sixth inning was the feature of the game. Zappia pitched winning ball until the fifth, when Lafayette started a rally that netted five runs. Patrizio then replaced him and held the opposition scoreless for the remainder of the game.

LEBANON VALLEY 6 WESTERN MARYLAND 2

Playing under adverse weather conditions that chilled players as well as spectators, the Mylinmen warmed the hearts of the small crowd by their decisive victory over Western Maryland. Piela, in his first game of the season, pitched wonderful ball, limiting the opposition to four scattered hits and having fourteen strike-outs to his credit. In the seventh, Wentz hit a triple to center field, the only extra base hit of the game.

LEBANON VALLEY 3 BUCKNELL 0

Zappia, Lebanon Valley's star hurler, entered into the Hall of Fame when he pitched his team to a no-hit no-run victory over the mighty Bisons of Bucknell. He was in rare form and at no time appeared to be in danger of being hit. Halicki, his opponent, also pitched great ball, allowing but four hits and striking out six men. Aside from pitching a no-hit no-run game, Zappia had one of the four hits and retired five men by the strike-out rout. Bendigo's double in the eighth was the big hit of the game. Lebanon Valley's success in bunching their hits coupled with Zappia's splendid performance on the mound, made this victory possible.

LEBANON VALLEY 5 PENN STATE 4

Continuing on her conquering way, Lebanon Valley tamed the fierce State Lion to the tune of 5-4. The defeat was the first that State had suffered on her home grounds since 1927. In the first inning, State scored two runs without having any hits. In the fourth, Patrizio and Bendigo singled, both scoring when Zappia caught one of Fry's slants and sent it over Delp's head for a long homer. French then tied the score by repeating Zappia's act. Zappia opened the lucky seventh with a single, advanced on Piela's sacrifice, and scored on Stewart's single. State tied it again in the eighth; and in the ninth Jacks scored the winning run on Saltzman's error. Piela pitched consistently, scattering the hits throughout the nine innings.

LEBANON VALLEY 0 SCHUYLKILL 3

Three bunched hits coupled with a walk in the second inning were responsible for the downfall of Lebanon Valley to Schuylkill. High winds held back powerful drives that would ordinarily have been extra base hits. Zappia, starting on the mound for Lebanon Valley, was unsteady, and was replaced in the fourth by Piela. With the bases full and one out, he struck out the next two to retire the side without further score. In the eighth, Patrizio brought the crowd to its feet by diving after Boyle's liner for a spectacular put out.

LEBANON VALLEY 4 URSINUS 2

Piela, star curver of the Lebanon Valley nine, hurled his teammates to a victory over Ursinus to top off a perfect May Day. He allowed four singles and four walks, but struck out eight of their batters. In contrast, the Blue and White collected ten hits. Both hurlers had the opposing batters at their mercy the first two innings. However, in the latter half of the third, Disney hit safely, Jacks advanced him to second, Dennis rolled out, and Albright singled to score Disney. In the fifth, Patrizio doubled and scored on Wentz's single. In the seventh, Wentz added another run to the score by hitting a double to center and scoring on a wild throw.

LEBANON VALLEY 6 SCHUYLKILL 5

Lebanon Valley gained sweet revenge from Schuylkill when they defeated them 6-5 at the latter's annual May Day exercises. The game was a hectic affair, both sides committing many errors. Zappia received good support as far as hitting was concerned. The Blue and White collected twelve hits, three of which were for extra bases. Piela was in the batting mood, having a single and two doubles. In the second inning, L. V. scored three runs on three hits by Bendigo, Zappia, and Piela, and Disney's sacrifice fly. Schuylkill tied the score in the fourth, but Lebanon Valley again took the lead when Jacks and Zappia scored. Schuylkill again tied the score in the sixth with two hits and a walk. In the seventh, Wentz was safe on a fielder's choice and scored the winning run on Piela's single.

LEBANON VALLEY 1 MOUNT SAINT MARY'S 0

Two errors in the eleventh inning enabled Lebanon Valley to win a pitcher's battle in an overtime tilt. Wentz reached first on an error, advanced to second on a walk, and scored when Valibus muffed Piela's terrific drive. The throw to the plate was perfect, but by a clever fall-away slide, Wentz slid under Villon safely. Piela pitched fine ball, not allowing a hit until the seventh. During the eleven innings, ten batters fanned at Piela's deceitful offerings, while only two reached first on balls. Lanahan pitched good ball for the visitors, allowing four hits and striking out eight. Murphy followed Lana-han and held the Blue and White hitless. Captain Wentz played spectacularly, fielding ten attempts with only one slip. Dennis showed his ability as a dependable first baseman in handling ten chances faultlessly.

LEBANON VALLEY 10 GETTYSBURG 16

The old jinx that seems to follow Lebanon Valley in all her contests with Gettysburg was present when the Bullets defeated the Mylinites 16-10. Both teams batted the opposing pitchers for thirteen hits. Costly errors on the part of the Blue and White aided Gettysburg. Lebanon Valley opened the barrage in the first inning by scoring three runs. Gettysburg came back in their half of the first by forging into the lead when they scored four runs on one hit. In the sixth and eighth they scored four and five runs respectively. Lebanon Valley started what appeared to be a sensational rally when they collected seven runs in the ninth, but it fell short of winning the game.

LEBANON VALLEY 3 JUNIATA 2

Lebanon Valley journeyed to Huntingdon and demonstrated their superiority over the Juniata Indians when they defeated them in a close contest 3-2. Although out hit eleven to seven, the local boys bunched four hits in the fourth to score three runs, the necessary total for the victory. In this frame, Wentz drove a homer over the left fielder's head to score Albright, who had reached first on an error. Zappia singled and Disney labeled one for three bases, bringing in the winning run. Juniata scored one in the second and another in the third. Both pitchers scattered the hits for the remainder of the game, and in spite of errorless playing, neither team was able to do any more scoring.

LEBANON VALLEY 3 SUSQUEHANNA 7

Consecutive hitting, and wildness on the part of Piela aided Susquehanna to amass seven runs from seven hits and thus defeat the Blue and White. Lebanon Valley scored in the second when Zappia singled and came in on Disney's triple. In the fourth and fifth Susquehanna collected four more runs. Albright opened the sixth with a double and scored on Wentz's single. Wentz then advanced as far as third on Zappia's single, when Bendigo sent a long foul to Wall, Wentz beat the throw to the plate and scored. Further scoring of the opponents resulted in the third defeat of the season for the Mylinites.

LEBANON VALLEY 1 VILLANOVA 10

Lebanon Valley's chance of a highly successful season was wrecked when Villanova handed out a 10-1 set back at Philadelphia. When Villanova laid down seven hits for a total of six runs, the hopes of our boys were completely ruined. Melanson, their clean-up man, smacked a long homer scoring two ahead of him. Hillen scattered the eight hits so well that only in the fourth was L. V. able to score, Zappia crossing the rubber for the lone tally. Villanova pounded the ball for fifteen hits, five of which were gathered by Flanagan, the outstanding performer of the day.

LEBANON VALLEY 3 ALBRIGHT 6

In front of a large Memorial Day crowd, Savage, Albright's hurler, muffled the Lebanon Valley bats so completely that the Blue and White came through on the short end of a 6-3 score. Until the seventh inning, when Wentz smashed a clean single, the Valley hitters stood at the plate like persons paying silent tribute to the unknown dead. Piela had rough going from the start. In the second, Paul was safe on a fielder's choice and Clemens walked. Cruttenden caught one of Piela's curves squarely and slammed it over the right field wall for a homer, scoring both men ahead of him. In the sixth, Zappia allowed Karlip and Strickler two scratch hits, which netted the Albright boys two more runs. The Blue and White were slow to score, Stewart and Disney both hit in the eighth, making it possible for the Lebanon Valley boys to make a start. In the ninth, Stewart's hit scored Bendigo who had reached first on an error.

LEBANON VALLEY 10 SUSQUEHANNA 1

Lebanon Valley overwhelmed Susquehanna in the closing game of the season with a score of 10-1, thereby gaining sweet revenge for the drubbing received earlier in the season. The Mylinites snapped right into the scoring in the first inning. Albright singled and went home on Wentz's short hit to right. Wentz later scored on Bendigo's sacrifice. The Valley boys went on a rampage in the fifth. Albright drew a pass, went to second on an error, stole third, and scored on Bendigo's single. Zappia bunted successfully, filling the bases. Stewart then cleaned the bags with a home run drive along the left field line. Danks retired to the showers. He was relieved by Donnell, who held the Blue and White in check by allowing but three runs during the rest of the fracas.

Men's Basketball Season

L. V. opened the season by playing Swarthmore on the home floor. The first half was closely contested, with neither team able to find the basket consistently, and the period ending with the score tied at 12-12. The second half, however, was a different story, as the Garnet came back with a display of great offensive power which produced the necessary points for Swarthmore to triumph to the tune of 37-24.

The second game was played with Dickinson at Carlisle. The contest was a succession of thrills as one team went into the lead only to have it taken away by the other. Our opponents went into the lead 17-11 to be ahead of the Blue and White at half time. In the second half, L. V. came back with plenty of fighting spirit which, however, was offset by Dickinson's remarkable display of fine passing. It was nip and tuck until the final whistle when it was found that our opponents had won 30-28.

Our quintet entertained Susquehanna at home, giving them a 43-27 drubbing. Our visitors could not manage to give us much opposition which gave "Hooks" a chance to use many substitutes. The game itself was not very interesting, but gave our players an opportunity to go on a scoring spree.

The Blue and White then invaded Maryland, when they met Mt. St. Mary's who proved to be a jinx to the Mylinmen. Both teams played a close guarding game and the first half ended with Mt. St. Mary's leading 13-8. The second half found the Mylin coached team evening up the score. Both teams came through with markers, only to have Mt. St. Mary's win in the last few seconds, the score being 25-23.

The next night, L. V. C. played Western Maryland on their floor. Smarting under the defeat of the previous night, the Blue and White passers came through in great style the first half, ending with L. V. leading 14-11. The second half was merely a continuation of the first with a fine display of teamwork, the score being 31-25 when the final whistle blew.

Villanova was our next victim, for they were downed by the mighty offensive power of the Mylinmen. The final score was 45-27, the worst beating Villanova has suffered in some years. The Wildcats started with a rush, making matters look blue for the home five. However, it was not long before L. V. found its stride, leading at half time 23-19. In the second half the spectators were treated to some first class basketball.

"Hooks" next took the squad to Gettysburg, where the Blue and White sprang a surprise to win 36-32. The game was another of those affairs in which the winner is uncertain until the final whistle. The L. V. quintet guarded closely, thus making it difficult for the high scorers of the Gettysburg five to get started. This was quite a set-back for them as it was only their third defeat of the season.

With no game in a week, our basketeers journeyed to Lancaster where they battled the F. and M. five. The game was a bitterly contested struggle from the beginning until the final whistle. The L. V. scoring combination was held in check by the extremely rough tactics of our opponents. The outstanding feature of the game was the very poor officiating; it was met with a show of displeasure by the spectators.

Following this setback, the squad traveled to Selinsgrove where Susquehanna was easily submerged under a 38-31 score. During the first half, substitutions were made in the L. V. line-up and Susquehanna forged into the lead, making the score 21-18 in their favor at half time. However, in the second half, with the regular combination functioning once more, the Blue and White had little difficulty in gaining the lead and holding it until the final whistle.

Then the Ursinus team came to Annville where they were repulsed by the Blue and White to the tune of 61-44. The score indicates the fact that both teams scored freely.

Both baskets were deluged by shots. After the regular combination had run up what appeared to be a safe lead "Hooks" made many substitutions, giving the bench-warmers a chance to display their powers.

Our next foe was our old rival, Albright. The game was played on the Armory floor in Reading. In the opening moments we jumped to a 15-7 lead, but this was soon overcome by Albright who led at half time 17-15. In the final half the Crimson and White went ahead to a safe lead making the final count 43-32.

On February 26, Muhlenberg came to Annville to be snowed under 54-32 by a flashing Lebanon Valley attack. The "Mules" managed to lead at half time by a five point margin. In the second half it was merely a case of clicking off goals for Lebanon Valley, for the ball slipped through the cords time after time. As the score mounted, the Muhlenberg players were given little chance to score, the ball seldom getting into their hands.

Out of Lancaster came the confident F. and M. five. The same five returned to Lancaster, but with the bitter echoes of defeat ringing in their ears. The cause of this was a mighty Lebanon Valley team which gave our opponents another taste of the famous L. V. fighting spirit. The home quintet overcame a fifteen point lead in the second half to triumph 33-30 in one of the most exciting games to be witnessed on the home floor.

In closing our schedule, the Blue and White met the Albright combination on the neutral floor in Lebanon. To say that the game was very exciting is putting it mildly, for the score at the finish was 41-40, L. V. holding the one point margin. Our quintet rose to great heights as they fought their way stubbornly from the under dog position to the lead. Some of our men were playing their last game for Lebanon Valley, and they ended their basketball career here in the most creditable manner. The game was a brilliant climax to a most successful season.

Appreciation

Since athletic events have taken the upward stride at Lebanon Valley, the men who have participated in the games have alone been given credit for the team's successes. Little has been said about the individuals who have practiced faithfully every day and who are not fortunate enough to represent the Blue and White on the gridiron, the court, or the diamond. While heaping our praises upon the heads of the varsity athletes, we are unconsciously neglecting the noble work of the substitute men. More of our praise should be given to the secondary material. Though unrecognized by us, the Reserves play a very important role on our athletic teams. They keep the varsity in playing condition by their continual practice with them, and elevate the spirit of the team by making the regulars fight for their positions. At a time when there is a critical game to be played, when colleges and universities are struggling for supremacy, most of the burden falls upon the Reserves. It remains for them to act the part of the rivals, and in this capacity, to oppose the varsity in practice so that the regulars may become accustomed to a particular style of playing.

Although not often appreciated openly, they will always remain a very important element in the sports world. Realizing their great value to our sports here, we have devoted this page to the "unsung Heroes of the team" who have worked diligently for the betterment of Athletics. Knute Rockne, the famous coach of Notre Dame once said, "The substitutes are the main factor in a team's success."

MISS FENCIL, GIRL'S COACH

Miss Fencil came to Lebanon Valley last fall to take over the coaching of co-ed sports. To say that she has been very successful would be putting it mildly, for the girls are seeing plenty of action in their different sports. Our first real taste of her ability was the basketball team she so ably coached through a successful season. Not only can she coach, but she herself excels in the various sports. Among her many duties are included the coaching of basketball, hockey, archery, and volleyball; also the instruction of the gym classes that include diversified activities.

Season

The Lebanon Valley girls played the initial game of their schedule with the Juniata co-eds on the Huntingdon floor. The girls from Annville were completely routed by the rather one sided score of 33-9. The Huntingdon stars sank basket after basket, having a merry time while the L. V. girls made heroic efforts to score. Although the girls wearing the Blue and White were unable to do much scoring, they did display, at times, clever passing and intercepting.

The Juniata team then came to Annville where they met a determined L. V. team. The local girls avenged themselves by winning in a closely contested game, the final score being 34-30. Both teams played a fine passing game with the forwards sinking baskets right and left for their respective teams. The score at half time was 15-15, which indicates to some extent how closely the two teams were matched. It was nip and tuck until the final few minutes, when the Lebanon Valley co-eds forged ahead to win.

The girls then traveled to Gettysburg, where they played the Gettysburg co-eds. Gettysburg won, 32-17, in a rough and tumble game. The referee failed to call fouls many times so that the L. V. girls did not have the free throws they should have had. In the first half the Blue and White team was rather bewildered by the rough tactics of the opposition, but in the second half the L. V. girls staged a determined, though fruitless, rally.

MARCH

RICE

The East Stroudsburg State Teacher's College team came to Annville and proceeded to give the L. V. girls a sound drubbing. If the score keeper did not miss any goals, the final score was 68-23, which is a rather good indication of the type of game this was. The visitors appeared to be invincible as they exhibited masterful floor work and passing. It so happened that this was the visitor's twelfth consecutive victory and by all appearance it should not have been their last.

Following this defeat, the co-ed team journeyed to Reading where they met the Albright co-eds on the Armory floor. In the first half Albright had the edge, leading at half time 13-9. In the second half, however, the L. V. co-eds gave the opposing team a few serious moments. The girls wearing the crimson and white managed to pull out in front to win by two points, with the score 19-17 as the final whistle blew.

Finally the jinx was sent for a ride and the local co-eds defeated the Gettysburg girls 27-24 on the home floor. It was a sweet revenge for the home team. The game was closely contested, but was kept free of any rough tactics. This was in deep contrast to the game away from home and the credit should be given to the referee. L. V. got off to a lead, but Gettysburg spurted to tie 12-12 at half-time. In the second half they forged ahead, but in the final seconds the L. V. girls tied the count and then proceeded to score the points necessary to win.

In a closely waged contest, L. V. defeated Ursinus on the latter's floor at Collegeville. Lebanon Valley started off with several baskets, only to have the Ursinus team do the same thing, tying the score time and again. Ursinus led at half-time, but L. V. spurted to sink several shots. The score was tie during the few remaining seconds, when L. V. scored on a free throw which proved to be the winning point as the game ended.

Playing the last game of the season, L. V. lost to Albright on the Lebanon floor. In the first half the Red and White tossers experienced little difficulty in scoring, so that they led at the end of the first period by 15-5. As the second half opened things looked rather blue for the L. V. co-eds, but they came back strong to diminish the Albright lead to a few points. Then the score was tied, but Albright proceeded to make a few markers which put them ahead as the game ended. Although the L. V. co-eds lost, they all played well in this game that brought to a close the girls basketball season.

Tennis Season

The 1929 tennis season found the Blue and White court squad facing one of the stiffest schedules since tennis took its place among the recognized sports at Lebanon Valley. There were thirteen matches to be played, six resulted in a win, two in a tie, one in a defeat and four were interfered with by rain. Results show that Lebanon Valley had a most successful season and the matches proved very interesting.

Lebanon Valley's representatives of the clay courts opened their inter-collegiate tennis season at home, where they played Elizabethtown College to a 3-3 tie. High winds caused players of both teams to play cautiously and many returns were inaccurate, shots being netted or driven out of bounds.

Traveling to Lancaster, May 1, the Blue and White racquet wielders were decisively trounced by the F. and M. stars, 6-0. Fink was the outstanding player for Lebanon Valley. Getting away to a poor start he dropped the first set 6-1, the second was evenly played, Eckman winning 7-5.

The Lebanon Valley tennis team opened May Day festivities quite auspiciously by trouncing the Schuylkill team 6-0. The spectators were treated with several well played and hard fought matches. Each L. V. representative showed a decided superiority over his rival. Hertzler with his steady lobbing and his advances to the net for well timed smashes proved to be the outstanding player of the day.

On May 21, the Albright team came to our courts and were decisively defeated by the Blue and White squad 6-0. This being the first match for the Albright team, the local boys had very little trouble in displaying their superiority. Shroyer and Hertzler, Blue and White stars, completely bewildered their opponents with their clever strokes, while Fink and Oyer held their own by easily winning their sets.

Fresh from two decisive victories over Schuylkill and Albright, the locals set out to conquer Dickinson. However, they were met with stiff opposition and were forced to accept a 3-3 tie. This match proved to be the best played and the most closely contested match of the season. Captain Shroyer, with his brilliant offense, practically staved off defeat for the Blue and White and enabled our boys to return with an even score. Shroyer was by far the outstanding player on both teams.

Journeying to Lebanon Valley College, the Susquehanna tennis team was handed a setback by the Blue and White squad. Susquehanna won three of the single matches while Lebanon Valley won two. L. V. C. took both of the doubles. Barnes of Lebanon Valley made his initial appearance on the local court. Captain Shroyer again had little difficulty in defeating his opponent.

Lebanon Valley journeyed to Elizabethtown and returned with its fifth victory of the season, having defeated Elizabethtown College 4-2. The match proved to be the hardest of the season for both teams.

Lebanon Valley closed its tennis season by winning from Susquehanna 4-2. This was the sixth victory of the season and the fourth in a row. Captain Shroyer and Hertzler were the outstanding players of the match.

Rifle Club

President ROBERT ROUDABUSH

Although it has seen a good many years of existence, the Rifle Club still maintains its exclusive membership. As the spirit moves them, the boys sling the guns over their shoulders, hike to the quarry, and shoot the government's ammunition until they puncture a few of the "Bulls". A few "shoots" were held this year, the most important being a victory over the Profs.

Girl's Hockey

Hockey has developed into quite a popular sport with the girls, and, although they have not scheduled any games, there have been contests between teams chosen from the hockey classes. It is evident that there is a marked improvement in the manner in which the sticks are handled, and in the development of team work. We have hopes that in the near future the girls will have developed a hockey team that will be able to match sticks against teams from other schools.

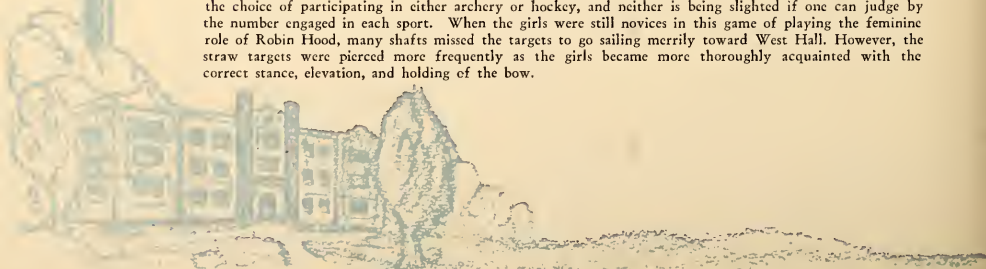

Bowling Team

This organization is one of the newer clubs on the campus, organized wholly as a leisure-hour affair. With Luthur Rearick as captain, it bowls various teams in the vicinity, always managing to get at least recreation from the encounter. Aside from varying the type of extra-curricular activities, the bowling team adds much in the way of association.

Girl's Archery

Archery has become a very popular sport with girls in colleges all over the country. Our girls have the choice of participating in either archery or hockey, and neither is being slighted if one can judge by the number engaged in each sport. When the girls were still novices in this game of playing the feminine role of Robin Hood, many shafts missed the targets to go sailing merrily toward West Hall. However, the straw targets were pierced more frequently as the girls became more thoroughly acquainted with the correct stance, elevation, and holding of the bow.

Interclass Baseball League

Competition in the interclass baseball league commenced on May 8th, and continued for two weeks. The first game of the season, Sophomores versus Juniors, turned out to be a victory for the Sophs, the score being 4 to 1. The following week, spirited by their first league victory, the Sophomores met and defeated the Frosh 11-10. The game proved to be the most interesting of the season; it was a neck to neck tussle from beginning to end. In the last half of the eleventh inning, the Sophomores started a rally when Welker singled through short and advanced to second on a passed ball. He proceeded to third when "Chubby" Watkins sent a high one into deep center for a sacrifice, and scored the winning run on a wild pitch by "Pop" Lee, the star Frosh hurler. In the final game of the season which was played to decide the championship of the league, the Sophs were defeated by the Seniors, 21-20. The interclass games not only developed better feelings and understanding between the groups, but also aroused a more intense interest in sports in general.

Sophomore-Freshman Football Game

Sometime before Thanksgiving the Sophomores and Freshmen began training for the annual game. Cunjak was elected mentor of the Sophs, while "Ken" Russell was made coach of the Frosh. After a few days of practice it became evident that the Sophs would have to base their hopes on an experienced and heavy line, while the Frosh would be compelled to look to a speedy backfield combination. However, when the day of the game arrived it was discovered that it would be necessary to stage the contest on a muddy field. Due to this fact the speedy backs of the Frosh were unable to find footing. English produced the big thrill for the crowd when he caught a Soph punt deep in his own territory and running along the eastern side-line, carried the ball half the length of the field before being tackled. Shortlidge proved to be the mainstay of the Sophomore eleven by gaining much ground through both tackles. Aside from this the game was a rather dull affair, except for the antics of some of the players who fell victims to the treacheries of the mud. Much fumbling was done by both sides, and as a result the ball changed hands frequently. Although each team drove deep into the other's territory, neither could produce. The game ended with the score of 0-0.

After a grueling struggle which lasted an hour and a half, the Sophmores succeeded in getting away with the banner.

The Tug-of-War

In order to be in good condition for this gruelling test of strength and stamina, the male members of the two under classes began practising early for this annual event. Trezise was selected as coach for the yearlings while Hertzler was chosen as tutor of the Sophs. As the day of the event drew nearer, the two teams concentrated on the problem of getting their hands hardened, and on that essential of a good tug team, co-ordination and team-work. The day of the event finally arrived. It was a typical one with plenty of rain to make the banks of the "Quittie" very slippery. Fortunately for the Frosh, they were given the right to pull on the west bank of the creek while the Sophs were on the east. After many delays the starting pistol was fired. In very short order the Sophs were floundering in the water and the Frosh were the winners of the first tug. Then the two teams withdrew to opposite banks and the second tug was soon under way. This, however, was a different story, the two teams straining and tugging with might and main, but without results. At last, after setting a new time record of two hours, it was decided that the tug should be called to a halt, on account of darkness and to pull again at some future date. A few days later when the tug was to be continued the Frosh team journeyed to the "Quittie" to find only a few loyal Sophs who were soon pulled into the "gink". The Frosh were declared the winners of the event and became the proud possessors of many feet of hemp.

Interclass Basketball

The Junior team defeated the Sophomore five in the first game of the interclass series. The third year men won in the closing moments with only a one point lead. A week later, the Sophs sank the Frosh to the tune of 43-28. The first year men put up a good fight, but it was to no avail. Again the Frosh were the goats when the Seniors easily defeated them 35-16. The Freshmen were completely outclassed by their opponents. The next fracas took place between the Seniors and the Juniors. The older class sprang a strong defense to triumph 34-26. The Frosh were again the underdogs as they went down to defeat before the onslaught of the Juniors. The score at the finish was 36-22. The Sophs then defeated their class cousins to gain their place in a three way tie for the championship. As the final whistle blew, the score was 39-18. In the first game of the title series, the Sophs again defeated the Seniors. The final score was 39-18. This gave the Sophs the right to play the Juniors for the title. In the final and deciding game, the Sophs came through to win from the Juniors. This triumph gave them the inter-class championship.

Lebanon Valley Life

Campus Leaders

CAMPUS ACTIVITIES of this year have drawn many into prominence, a fact which makes it difficult to single out any one person as a campus leader.

Nevertheless, the staff has attempted to select the seven members of the Senior Class who most deserve this honor. In making the choice, leadership in a worthy enterprise, coupled with a true Lebanon Valley Spirit and a joy in the work, was the basis of consideration. We have selected the following:

Roy Bishop Albright, who, as a leader in sports and as a true gentleman, has merited the sincere admiration of all of us.

Homer John Allwein, who, as a genuine Lebanon Valleyite, is one we are proud to have represent us.

Mary Blanche Cochran, who, because of her cheerful personality, her willingness to cooperate, and her participation in college activities, has proven worthy of our praise.

Ruth Grace Cooper, who, because she venerates that which is true and beautiful, has inspired us to better things.

James Calvin Keene, who, because of his diversified interests, has shown us that he can live life to the full. We need not enumerate his merits; they are secondary to that which we know as character.

Madeline Anna Rife, who, as an incessant worker and cooperative being, has made lighter the paths of many.

Alvin Edgar Shroyer, who, as he works and plays hard, has lived among us for four years as "Eggie".

- April 4 Kalo! No flowers.
- May 2 Philo! Ditto.
3 May Day. Work for the Frosh; Dancing for the girls; A Quittie for all!

Saturday morning, and continued until late in the afternoon. Frank and wholesome discussions were held in each group, and they were ably led by their respective leaders. One of the most important was that of "Finding One's Place in Life" led by Jack Hart. In this group he outlined that which constituted a call, and after discussing the matter pro and con for some time, he gave a clear and definite path to follow when choosing a life work. Another discussion of vital interest was that on "Faculty-Student Relations" led by Dr. Limbert. This group was helpful in that it brought faculty and students into a mutual understanding through frank interchanging of ideas. Probably one of the outstanding results of this group was the revival of the Student-Faculty Council which had previously existed on the campus. Those attending the group on "Relations Between Men and Women" led by "Bill" Kroll also derived much benefit from the discussion of problems on sex relationships. Another interesting and profitable discussion was that led by "Pit" VanDusen on "Forming a Philosophy of Life". He opened many new channels for thought, thus helping the students to draw definite conclusions concerning many matters.

Dr. Limbert, leader of the Student-Faculty group, gave a lecture on Saturday afternoon based on the subject of his group. It was followed by a short open forum. The evening was used for socializing, and a light, interesting program was given in the chapel. On Sunday morning, a very impressive Communion service was held. Dr. Gossard opened the service with the invocation, which was followed by an anthem by the choir, Mrs. Mills acting as soloist. Dr. VanDusen officiated at the service, assisted by Dr. Butterwick and Dr. Richie. The service was closed with a recessional hymn by the choir. The last meeting of the conference was held on Sunday afternoon at which time echoes from the different colloquia were given by students representing each group. Following this, Dr. VanDusen delivered an address on "The Personality of Jesus in our Pagan Society". The entire body joined in the singing of "Follow the Gleam", after which it officially adjourned. To the "Y's" belongs the credit for its success.

COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS AND RESTRICTED SCIENCES
COMPULSORY COURSES

EDUCATION

13—Technique of Teaching—A course which aims to prove to the student that in everything there is a certain technique—even in teaching. Practice in pitching the voice, elevating the eyebrows, knowing the psychological moment to tap the desk, forehead, or nose with the pedagogical pencil—the forehead indicating, “nobody home”; the nose, “nose all”, or all nose, as the case may be. This course is supervised by an M.A. in this Technique.

23—Educational Measurements—An expensive course, and therefore, recommended to few. Those taking this course, must be provided with instruments of measurement which will be used in calculating the capacity of craniums whether concrete or congealous. This course leads to the degree of M.P., (Master Phrenologist.)

SELECTIVE COURSES

BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION

122—Money and Banking—A very practical course for Profiteers and Yeggs. Specializes in how to get money easily; how to invest it easily; how to lose it easily; and then when aforesaid money is lost, how to borrow from the bank and still evade the law. This course is not open to Co-eds, and is offered from 12 to 2 A.M. Text used: How to Escape Wall Street Just Before the Crash.

POLITICAL SCIENCE

24—World Politics—An unvarnished presentation of political strife and subtleties from the organization of political parties to the present day. A special feature of this course is an intimate study of famous and infamous political affinities, relative to their personality, power and influence. Impossible to sleep during this course.

PSYCHOLOGY

112—Adolescent Psychology—To be admitted to this course, the prospective student must have acquired a certain “Cockiness” of manner which will assure his instructor that he has seen much; felt more, but is still capable of acting the part of an adolescent of 14.

PHYSICS

(Meets frequently, at inclination of Professor in charge.)

18—Physics—A course offered to B.S. students. It explains why the planes incline, girls decline, and dogs recline. The matter of weights is taken up and at times lifted over the head. Practical information for prospective humorists is freely imparted. Text must be purchased before final examinations, at least a week before.

It will be interesting to learn that, by an oversight, the editor published a panel before it had been approved by the Freshmen on the second floor of the Dorm. We regret that the panel was not given the attention that it should have received, and hope it can pass in spite of the fact that the experienced green-caps slipped a notch in their advice and general management.

Too late to be classified:

Fiend follows flapper! Tries to wreck love nest. "I didn't realize," sobs Bernita.

Crook gets big haul. Three cakes of soap, three tubes tooth paste, one razor blade missing from South Hall. Detective Smith hot on trail.

And then there was the Freshman who wanted to know where the "Elk's" Club dance would be held.

Advice To The Love-lorn

BY ANNIE ROONEY

Dear Annie Rooney:

I am a young girl just out of my teens, and since my mother does not understand me, I am coming to you for some much-needed advice. Although I sing, play the pipe-organ and am considered by my best friends to be talented in these accomplishments, in matters of the heart I seem to have no talent whatsoever. For the past two years I have been keeping company with a handsome, young, and athletic Pat-riot from Squirrel Hill. Please don't think that I am a nut too, but although he seems very fond of me, and has told me so many times, I can't decide whether I should tell him how I feel, or not. What shall I do? I do have feelings, you know.

Anxious and earnestly yours,

Bashful Huldah (I'm Swedish only on one side.)

Dear Annie Rooney:

Even baseball players have their problems, and the matter troubling me now is: Shall I teach a year; shall I try professional baseball, or shall I marry the girl, and become a Life-saver at Atlantic City? If you can help me I shall be eternally grateful.

Big Ben.

Miss Annie Rooney:

I am a timid little girl, and the boys all tease me because I once said, "I love my Howard". But he was one of those who come and go, and now I like two more—one, a school teacher, and the other a big bronzed athlete. "I can't decide." Can you?

Perplexed!

The above column is reserved for the benefit of all young girls who are having trouble with their heart, soul or roller-skates. Please accept Annie as your friend and confidante. Address all questions to:

ODE TO GRANT

"Make me a child again just for tonight,"

Once said a Scotchman and Scotchmen are tight:

"I'm leaving tonight on a boat trip to Ayr,

Make me a child and I'll travel half fare."

Mary E.— Will you always love me?

Earl— Yes honey, as long as easy payments last.

What a Man!

Little Ewalt stepped off the train at Annville and six husky football men pounced on him. He was a Freshman, green as grass, couldn't recite the Constitution of the United States backwards, nor could he tell off hand how many square feet of floor space there was in the Alumni Gym. Nevertheless, they pounced on him and made him promise to do full justice to his latent powers.

Immediately upon arriving at the school, he took the campus by storm. He was pledged Delta Lambda Sigma the first evening. The whole Dorm turned out to shake hands with him and offered to arrange dates with the snappiest co-eds in the school.

Little Ewalt, aged 18, weight 102, went out for the varsity and became the quarterback. In other fields he was equally successful, being chosen president of the class, captain of the debating, hockey, baseball, basketball, and tennis teams. He also made the scrub Glee Club without the least difficulty.

But why go on? Simply call 9060 and find out for yourself the secret of this marvel of the age. Ewalt himself attributes his phenomenal success to the marvelous preparation of a certain Miss Pinkham. When taken twice daily in moderate doses, the effects are most unusual.

College Has Its Virtues

The college man was brought before the judge on a charge of disorderly conduct.

"Young man", said he, "another such charge and you'll get a jail sentence—and you know our jails are none too pleasant. The food is the same week after week. You are buffed and kicked continually by the other prisoners. Life in our jail is a perpetual turmoil".

The college man did not show the least signs of weakening.

"Not only that", the judge continued, "but you are placed with a most desperate, ungodly, notorious band of parasites. Everything you have will be used by everybody else. All sorts of unpleasant jokes will be played on you. Labor is hard and crushing".

The college man grinned.

"You laugh, do you?" asked the judge, "just wait until the very marrow of your bones is frozen by the yells of the other prisoners, and your life is a continual agitation".

"That child's play doesn't frighten me", replied the college man.

"Why man, where have you lived that you call this child's play?"

"Three years in the men's dorm at L. V. C.", quietly replied the accused.

"Case dismissed".

Opinions

- Rhoads—"To hell with women and to the dogs for me."
 Taranto—"Soap, toothpaste, and Red Man with the Matriculation fee."
 Cunjak—"I was the best president that the 'L' Club ever had."
 Becker—"I bet you can easy fox him out of cuts."
 Weigel—"My name's not Clara, but I have it."
 Bendigo—"I could coach the damn team better myself."
 Grant—"Where the devil's that penny I dropped."
 Fiorello—"I wish you guys would buy Camels."
 Yake—"More steps from the rumble seat."
 Patrizio—"I'm running this debating team."
 Burtner—"Free bus service to Palmyra."
 Barnhart—"Holy mackerel, we had a good 'Y' Meeting!"
 Hafer—"Let me tell him."
 Weber—"Bigger windows in South Hall."
 Hutchison—"I have the nicest girl on the campus."
 Strebig—"I'm still undecided."
 Russell—"Love 'em and leave 'em."

Chinese Dreams

Assailing my nostrils was the faint perfume of orange blossoms, light, but hauntingly lovely-like Oriental music which rushes to a climax, then dies off gracefully like the sob of a lost soul. It permeated my whole being. Nowhere had I seen such a garden, or sensed such beauty, for it was natural beauty fully expressed. Nowhere such blossoms; one falling made no sound.

Yet there was a sadness about my heart almost too frail for words. I suddenly recalled the cause.— My departure was set for the next day. Fingering idly in my pocket, I pulled out a small, carved, box curiously worked in a design of two gargoyles and a dragon's tail. Within ---? Would I dare to let it work upon my senses, flinging consciousness to the winds? Would I dare to search for a more wonderful world of the imagination than this captivating spot of reality? My last few hours. The suggestion became a desire stronger than any I had ever experienced. To abandon myself in this lovely garden to thoughts perhaps more horrible than lurid sights of suffering. What a terrible contrast to my present environment. Dare I risk all that? Anything— for tomorrow I must leave.

A few pungent fumes rose before my face— the vapours attacking first my physical, then mental being. I was unable to think as I willed, for my mind was whirling off into limitless space. I grew drowsy. -----

All the most poignant emotions of my former youth came over me. The sorrow of disillusioned love. The features of her who had been the embodiment of all that was lovely and pure, a paradise to work for; and then, she had turned her face away. I still touched her hand as in a dream. Yet from this, I had issued not forever wrecked, I found myself absorbed in a field of work, challenging and not to be touched by failure.

Again, I felt that I had found the fullest meaning of life in the study of art. All these sensations seemed happening to another, yet the feelings were familiar to me.

There was a whiff from nearby petals. One, dropping, almost touched my cheek. Gradually the garden adjusted itself to my eyes, dazed by retrospection. I looked at the comforting trees, felt the soft grass beneath my feet. Why had I been drawn back to the past; made to suffer again the failures separated by fatality's thin thread? I felt no depression as formerly, for I saw a glimpse of the future, brightened by a web of dreams to lead me higher. These I could not abandon, for life without hope is as dust on parched lips. Ah, I had found a way to dreams more powerful than those brought on by sleep. I clasped the tiny, carven box, and realized a new meaning in the lurid tail of a dragon.

THERE IS A DIFFERENCE IN PRINTING

ALL artists do not create pictures of equal merit. All composers do not conceive music of equal beauty and melody. All writers are not equally skilled in choosing and using themes and words.

Nor is all PRINTING alike. Superior printing is not alone a matter of equipment or of materials, of time or even of skill. Rather it is a combination of these and a great many more.

To combine all our facilities to truly produce SUPERIOR PRINTING is the everyday aim of this organization.

It is therefore with true pride that we make our imprint on
